JACKET SUIT COMES INTO ITS OWN

By LUCY CLAIRE

These are the days when one stands shivering before the shop windows, viewing summer scenes and Palm Beach clothes. Sleeveless, thin silk or cotton or voile-like cloth, beach pajamas and bathing suits are all around these present sporting on pseudo sands with gentle sea waves, gulls and a summer sky painted in the background. Maybe we cannot go to Palm Beach, not all of us at any rate, but we get a thrill out of knowing six months in advance what is going to be worn next summer. For Palm Beach is the thermometer of fashion for summer apparel.

In nearly all the "showings" jacket suits are more numerous than anything else. The jackets are usually either belted at the normal waistline in short effect, taking inspiration from the bolero. The tuck-in blouse is most frequently seen, not only with the jacket suit, but with the long sleeved ensemble. Prints show every sign of being as strong as ever. While there are many sleeveless frocks, especially in the tennis group, other models appear to put in a protest with sleevelets, either in tiny shoulder caps or the short sleeve coming half way between shoulder and elbow.

Lightning Change Ensemble
A new idea is the lightning change ensemble that works three ways. For street wear it is the jacket suit with tuck-in blouse. The jacket may be removed, leaving the skirt with its sleeveless blouse for the informal club luncheon, or both jacket and skirt may be removed, leaving the sleeveless tennis frock for active sports.

You will find a suit of this type in gray lightweight tweed, worn with black kid step-in shoes and a black hat, sketched at the left. For the tennis game white tennis shoes are naturally substituted for the black street shoes. Gray with black accessories, by the way, is particularly smart, and gray is looming up on the fashion horizon with a fair chance of all the gray costume by summer.

An innovation in the tuck-in blouse suit is shown by Madame Schiaparelli, as sketched in the center. Here the skirt buttons up on the silk blouse in the front, terminating the skirt yoke in a point fastened under a meeting pointed trim on the blouse. This appeared in a green tweed and was worn with black shoes and hat, black being quite in the limelight for accessories to grow. One of the belted suits for town wear is shown at the right of the sketch. This expresses the new flared jacket introduced for spring. It is of a purplish blue crepe cloth, worn with a contrasting satin blouse of salmon pink, blue kid pumps and a blue felt hat of the same purplish color. Accessories should match or contrast with the costume. Blue is such a universally becoming color that many women prefer the matching shades and hat. Green and gray are not so universally becoming, and are therefore better with contrasting accessories, such as the black hats and shoes mentioned.

SOUGHT TO HELP OUT; NOW HEADS CRADLE ROLL OF 186, WORLD'S LARGEST

SALISBURY, N. C., a city of less than 14,000 inhabitants, proudly boasts of the largest Sunday school cradle roll department in the world. It is at St. John's Lutheran Church.

Mrs. J. C. Dunham, guiding spirit behind the organization, has had only three years' experience in this type of religious work and assumed her task "just to help out in the Sunday school" when it had a mere handful of babies. Now she has 186 babies on her roll, all of whom are less than four years of age, and nine department officials, 12 teachers and four assistant teachers who help her in the Sunday morning work.

Mrs. Dunham didn't even think of her department as being anything out of the ordinary until she went to a Sunday school convention some time ago to find out something about how a cradle roll should be run.

Before the convention was over she found that she, who had come to sit at the feet of the more experienced, was making the main address of the period set aside for cradle roll discussion.

LIKE the old woman who lived in the shoe, Mrs. Dunham gathers her flock of nearly 200 tiny pupils about her every Sunday morning.

Her department takes up the greater portion of the lower floor of the church. There she has a central assembly room done in cheerful blue and equipped with a piano, baby chairs, Bible scenes, blackboards and sand tables. Flanking this room are several smaller ones where the children are grouped according to age. They learn Bible stories and are taught to play, sing, draw and cut out pictures.

In the nursery are kiddie-cops, spotless white-beds and swinging cradles. On the floor are long rows of beds where babies who are too small to sit up are contented in a veritable sea of toys. This department serves as a day nursery for mothers who want to be in adult Bible classes or at preaching services later.

FOR mothers who have very small children and who are not content to leave them, a special Bible class for mothers has been organized in connection with the cradle roll department. Here mothers sit with their babies in their laps while they hear the day's lesson. Baptisms are conducted in the cradle roll department in the presence of parents and the other children. Every January all of the children in the department who have reached the age of 5 are pro-

After serving meat for several dinners in succession, a fish dinner is very refreshing. Here is one planned for two people.

Today's Recipes
Fillet of Sole—Wash two slices of fillet of sole, dip in cracked crumbs in which have been mixed salt, pepper and paprika. Roll and fasten with toothpicks, place on buttered pan and dot with butter. Bake at 375 degrees, heating of oven about 25 minutes. When ready to serve pour over a thick white sauce in which you have heated a small can of shrimps. On top cut chopped parsley and serve with lemon slices, if desired.

Tomato Salad—When ready to serve cut tomatoes in quarters, remove seeds and let stand to form a flower, with stem end up, placing olive in center and mayonnaise over top. Serve on lettuce leaf.

Souffles
Souffles are exciting in their preparation. To make them perfect, they should be baked just as long, and not a minute longer. The standard time and temperature is 40 minutes in an oven 375 degrees. If not baked long enough or in a hot enough oven they will fall. If baked in too hot an oven or too long, they are not to curl. And they should be served just the minute they come from the oven.

Mode Turns Spotlights On Details

By MADAME RUBINSTEIN
It's a fatal truism that the little things in life make all the difference. We break tanks' backs with straps, and overturn hay stacks looking for needles. A run in stocking ruins our disposition, and a delicious bon-bon sets them right again. And no where are little things count more than in our wardrobe. The sum total of a perfect effect is just the one little, often forgotten thing.

The wrong rouge, the wrong lipstick, powder that doesn't blend with your skin, gloves that aren't the right color, hose that don't match the gloves, a handkerchief not in keeping with a costume because it's too "sporty" or too lacy or too bright in color—these are the details to watch in planning your perfect ensemble.

This season the new mode has turned a spotlight on faces and accessories that make a man a costume, and the ever important makeup. A perfect skin has always been the sine qua non of beauty, but today, with off-the-face hats and coiffures and the subtly adorning, feminine styles, it is essential. No crowd-pleaser or frown lines, no blackheads, coarse pores or roughness, can be allowed to destroy the ensemble effect of the well groomed perfect lady.

The trick I am going to write about the little things that you must watch to keep yourself looking perfectly groomed. And before I begin, let me make this one suggestion. Form the mirror precipice before every mirror you see. Nothing looks more ridiculous than a woman looking at herself in a mirror and seeing a different person.

You should have somewhere in your home, preferably in your own bedroom, one full length mirror, so that you can see yourself from top to toe after dressing. The triple mirrors are also good for showing different sides of your face and head. But if you haven't one of these, learn to use your hand mirror so skillfully that you will always know yourself from every angle. And make a habit of using a mirror in the bright daylight. It may be cruel, but at least it's truthful. Hang your mirror where a good light strikes it, and look bravely in every time you pass.

New! A Three-Well Sink

This extra-efficient Kohler sink has two regular compartments—one for washing, one for rinsing. Both have the Kohler Drainstrainer. They hold water without using a pan, and catch debris in a removable strainer trap.

On the left is a laundry tub, its cover serving as a drainboard. And notice the two swinging mixing faucets; the rinsing hose; the handy containers underneath for garbage and cleaning materials.

There are many new Kohler sinks—unmatched in efficiency; beautiful in colored enamel or in white. Some actually wash dishes or clothes by electricity. Let us tell you all about them.
