

AUTO TURNS OVER AS DRIVER STOPS

Highland Park Man Taken To Doctor's Office By Swanson

John A. Nacy, 232 Moss avenue, Highland Park, president of the Nacy Clay Products Co. located at 1428 west Lafayette street, narrowly escaped death Thursday afternoon when his automobile turned upside down at the intersection of Vaughn and Lahor roads.

Robert F. Swanson, of Lone Pine road, told the Bloomfield Hills police that driving along Lahor road, approaching Vaughn road, he saw the car driven by Mr. Nacy approaching on Vaughn road at a high rate of speed. Mr. Nacy, fearing a collision, jammed on his brakes and landed wrong side up on the bank, he said.

Lacerations of the left forearm were the only injuries sustained by Mr. Nacy, who was taken by Mr. Swanson to the office of Dr. John Gordon, Birmingham, for treatment.

Sir John Orme, of Wickford, Eng., who rode one of the first motorcycles ever manufactured, is said to be one of the senior students still riding them at the age of 74.

free wheeling is here! You don't have to touch the clutch, except to start or back up!

Free Wheeling—the greatest of Studebaker's many impressive contributions to the industry's progress! Studebaker is the first American car to offer free wheeling. Like many marvelous engineering advances, free wheeling is simplicity itself. Imagine a car in which you don't have to touch the clutch, except to start or back up! Think of being able to shift from high to second at fifty... fifty miles per hour, and never touch the clutch!

in heavy traffic! Consider, too, the economy of less carbon, less strain and wear on engine, transmission and all driving units! You literally glide along. Your car momentum never forces your engine—there is no sensation of "piling up" when you decelerate. Your car is surprisingly quiet in every speed... uncannily silent when you're free wheeling. Almost incredible as these statements may seem to you, a drive in the New Series Studebaker President or Commander Eight will prove them to you. We promise you the thrill of your life.

Eccentricities

By LEO A. DONOVAN

WHEN is a college graduate not a graduate? Not so long ago, a young man attending a near-by institution for higher education, by force of circumstances, attained the rank of senior. He was a member of that class by virtue of enrollment the previous fall. But he was not a scholar.

The young man's mother had taken great pride in her son. She expected him to be a leader among men—as all mothers expect their sons to be. In his final year at the University her son had developed into—well, not the leader of his class. And when the final examinations were held, he "blunked" in several subjects.

Unfortunately, the final examinations were held too soon before the commencement exercises and all preparations for the young man's exodus into the world of work had been made. His picture had been taken for the school year book. He had been placed on the list of graduates. His diploma had been ordered. But he did not receive it.

Ashamed to admit his failure, he told his fond parents that he was to be one of the senior students still riding them at the age of 74.

and hear the advice of famous speakers who was to distribute the diplomas and degrees. His mother, therefore, invited more than a score of friends to witness this happy event.

Now, when the graduates filed out on to the platform, the youth was not to be seen among them. His name was missing. The course. But because of the large number of graduates, the over-concealing forms, customary decorations for such events, were believed to be hiding him and a dozen other youths whose "boards" could be seen nodding behind the plants. When the last of the diplomas had been presented and her son had failed to appear—well, it was the mother's "Most Embarrassing Moment."

In the meantime, the son was playing poker with numerous other failures and friends. The game lasted all night and in the morning the young man went home. He placed some clothes in a suitcase and with his winnings, purchased a ticket for San Pedro, Calif. He left a note, explaining his intentions, and departed for the School of Hard Knocks.

He obtained employment in various countries, returning home a year later after having been around the world.

Whether the young man is now a successful looking agent, buyer or seller, or what, we do not know. And if this tale has a moral it's probably, "There are no commencement exercises in the School of Hard Knocks."

ETHEL ROMIG FULLER'S poem "Dawn Interval" has been printed in so many journals of the day that we also feel obliged to reproduce it as the most appropriate tribute to its beauty. And so:

Dawn, be careful lest you break The black crystal Of this lake— If it is so still So limpid, thin, With a wedge of moon Set in. Swallow, wait Beneath your eaves! Willow, stand still! Stay your leaves! Lily, do not open, Heron, wade out From the shore. Ambiguity is so intuitive Let this perfect moment Live.

HENRI F. AMIEL, a philosopher, believes that the age of the present age of materialism and mass production, he believes, will cause the disappearance of really great individuals.

The "statistical will register a growing progress and the moral is a gradual decline—the useful will take the place of the beautiful," he says.

This contention he holds despite the fact that many of the greatest works of art were accomplished under democratic France's art patronage.

What new arts or old arts renew are evident today? Competent critics defend the modernistic music form as an expression equal to the beautiful and revolutionary as was Wagner's masterpieces when they first were released to an unbelieving world.

The greatest obstacle in the path of art's progress today is Time. We have annihilated Time and we pause not even for the funeral. Yet there are wise old men somewhere thinking for the children of the future.

Robert Quillen offers a relatively pointed problem. "If quantity production lowers quality, will—ask the self-made who is one of a family of thirteen children," says he.

FROM TEE TO GREEN

By ROY GROVE, Central Press Golf Writer. THAT MEDIUM approach shot to the green anywhere from 150 to 170 yards is, as a rule, scarce Mr. Average Golfer to death. It is very hard for him to make up his mind as to the club to use and how to use it.

selected then the player is inclined to "baby" the shot for fear of going over the green.

These three clubs show a difference of 30 yards between them and that yardage means a great deal when you are in the hole.

In using the No. 4 iron, No. 1: Stand one note where the arms and hands are in (B). No. 2: The follow through at the hole, shown in (C). See that the hands are well over the shaft, especially the left hand.
