ple, at least in sufficient number to keep me in public service. "The problems facing the nation are greater now than ever before in my 20 to 25 years of observation. The issue is not merely greater than any individual, I'm entirely willing to submerge my personal life in my office, and the interests of those who can evoke solutions of our greatly unbalanced economies.

"All of my life I've been devoted to solving problems, and while by no means is it intended to signify that I've solved them all properly it does mean that if experience counts for anything it means that a solution must be found to the unbalanced economic condition we find ourselves in. A Nation of Employees.

"To put the problem in simple language: Are we to become a nation of employees, or are we going to maintain our individualities as every historian and economist admits has been the foundation of the greatest development of a nation? The answer to that question is not going to be decided by any individual, it means that a solution must be found to the unbalanced economic condition we find ourselves in. A Nation of Employees.

"I'm not going to give up my individuality for any one else. I'm not going to give up my individuality for any one else. I'm not going to give up my individuality for any one else.

"No one is a stronger advocate of home-rule for cities and states than I. Home-rule can be exercised without the interference with the home-rule of other cities and states. I have, through my 18 years at Washington, become an ardent supporter of state sovereignty. Yet I realize that we are one great nation and that there arises national problems which can only be handled by the national government.

"The necessary expansion of industries and the insecurity in the expansion of credit have created a new condition in the United States today that might be compared to a fever. And it might be compared to a fever. We still suffer from it. I can see nothing on the horizon to encourage us except that I would like to be able to say otherwise. A nation cannot go on a drunk and more than a half century ago I saw that the United States today that might be compared to a fever. And it might be compared to a fever. We still suffer from it. I can see nothing on the horizon to encourage us except that I would like to be able to say otherwise.

At every meeting he was enthusiastically received, and at the dinner at Northwood where he was expected, George A. Dondero, 150 College, who only 75 had been president of the club, acted as chairman of the day. A score of automobiles bearing the signs were lined up on the lawn, and Brucker accompanied him on his general tour of the county. On Monday, Brucker, as his attorney general, ordered all county elections to be held on the same day, that is, the day of George A. Dondero. Welsh had asked that his name be taken off following what was considered a withdrawal scored by John S. Haggerty, secretary of state, who included Welsh's name on the petition for Welsh's nomination were filed without Welsh knowing about them, political observers report.

"Music from string instruments, expertly played, greeted the cars and attracted the attention of strollers and shoppers who passed the Majestic Radio Shop, South Woodward Saturday evening, Mel G. Switzer, banjo strummer, and O. E. Hannon, steel guitar player, gave a free concert to many groups of listeners. They are from the Hawaiian Studio, Pontiac, and plan to give a demonstration every Saturday evening.

William C. Rowland, his son, Jimmie, of 512 Hanna avenue, has started on a tour of the state, and has called on other points in northern Michigan on a three weeks' camping trip, and for Charles Rowland are traveling by motor, with their tent and other equipment in a tract made by Mr. Rowland himself.

"Golfers who have found the Grand Trunk Railway embankment the next greatest hazard on the Bloomfield Township course (the new one) for the first, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth holes are the greatest may be relieved to learn that a local rule has been put out for making the embankment out of bounds and putting the distance only, this Wanderer from the fairways learns.

Dahlia, yellow and purple, and gladiolus of stupendous size, standing seven feet high, were brought into The Eccentric office Tuesday by Mr. William McColum, of East Maple avenue. The beautiful specimens are producing this summer under Mr. McColum's painstaking care. The Dahlia has a diameter of 18 inches in diameter and were admired by members of The Eccentric staff. This Wanderer, however, unfortunately mistook the gladiolus as a hollyhock, and said so. His ignorance having refreshed the multi-tude, he was instructed as to the beautiful species before him. And over after this he will be able to distinguish a daisy from a dandelion—perhaps.

lotment of the 225 acres of Cranbrook estate, founded 25 years ago, was recently announced. Accredited science, which will be completed in the fall. A board of directors to operate the school will be named within the next week or 10 days, according to William T. Barbour, a member of the board. Twelve persons to be appointed by the trustees will select another three to form a board of directors. The trustees, besides Mr. Barbour, who is president of the Detroit, Michigan State Co. are as follows: Ralph Stone, chairman of the board of the Detroit & Security Trust company; Alvan Macaulay, president and general manager of the Packard Motor Car company; Truman W. Goodenough, senior member of the law firm of Ryan, Goodenough, Loring & Bennett; Colonel Sidney D. Waider, president of the Detroit Rapid Transit commission; Clarence E. Booth, chairman of the Detroit Motor Bankers corporation; and James E. Leggett, president of the American Blower corporation.

The association will consist of two representatives from each unit, appointed by the board of directors of that unit. The committee was organized at a meeting last June, and will begin activity functioning at the beginning of the fall term. No legal status will attach to the association, whose functions will be purely advisory. Meetings will be held once a month, when the social, athletic, and cultural programs of the schools will be arranged in harmony with each other. both sexes to the sixth grade. The older girls will be transferred to the Kingswood school. Mr. Thornton said that he had completed this.
