AUTHORITY ON COUNTY HISTORY TELLS OF EARLIEST SETTLERS

Perhaps the most outstanding informant on the history of Oakland County and particularly of the Troy township region, is Miss Hazel Randall, of Troy township. Miss Randall is second vice-president of the society, and one of the few persons in the county abundantly supplied with historic information concerning the pioneers of the county and its early settlements.

Miss Randall, who lives in a neat little cottage on Main street near the Big Beaver road, possesses a remarkable fund of information concerning these pioneers and early settlers. Her great-grandfather was Aaron Webster, who came to Oakland County in 1820 and in 1822 founded and named the village of Auburn, on what is now Auburn road. Auburn is known as East Pontiac, and has also been called Amy and Auburn Heights.

Until a few years ago the original little frame house that Aaron Webster built in 1822 was still standing in its original position. It was constructed entirely by Webster of materials from his own sawmill, which he built near the site. It then exorbitant price of $10 a 1,000 feet for lumber from the mill in Pontiac. The house was razed to make way for a modern hardware store.

Dedicated Cemetery
Aaron Webster figured prominently in the affairs of Oakland County and of early Michigan, before it became a state. He donated to Governor Cass, for his successors and the future State of Michigan, the first township cemetery in Pontiac township and one of the few in the state, and also gave an acre of land on which was to be built a school.

At that time, Miss Randall says, the county had but two townships, Oakland and Bloomfield, Oakland comprising the north half of the county, and Bloomfield the south half. After there were more divisions until today there are 25 townships. The original names of Oakland and Bloomfield townships still exist, but the townships themselves are considerably smaller than formerly.

Aaron Webster also enjoyed the distinction of being a charter member of the first Masonic Society in Oakland County. His descendants still possess his Masonic apron, signed with many designs "in the order," and also the document proclaiming him a member. They have provided a number of interesting exhibits to the Troy township museum in the Town Hall on Main street.

Died During Epidemic
In 1823, three years after coming to Oakland County from the tiny hamlet of Aurelius, N. Y., near Auburn, after which he named Auburn, Mich., Aaron Webster and his wife died during a typhoid fever epidemic which swept all this part of the state. They followed their son-in-law to

CARILLON RECITAL PROGRAMS GIVEN

Compositions To Be Played June 27 and July 2, Are Announced

The programs for two more of the series of carillon recitals at Christ Church Cranbrook, by Antioch Brees, bellmaster of the Mountain Lake Singing Tower, Fla., and professor of campanology at the Curtis Institute at Philadelphia are announced today by Christ Church officials.

Motorists are asked to shut off motors and lights as soon as possible when arriving at the church. If leaving before the end of the recital, they are asked to do so only between numbers. The bells are best heard at a distance of from 500 to 1,000 feet from the tower.

Recitals will be given every Wednesday and Friday evening at nine o'clock until Sept. 26. This is Mr. Brees' second season of recitals. He officiated at the dedication of the carillon in 1928.

MANY ATTEND CATTLE SHOW

Prize Cows Judged At Annual Exhibit At Endicott Farm

Approximately 300 members of the Michigan Guernsey and Breeders' association from all over the state congregated Friday at the Bloomfield Hills farm of John Endicott on Chesterfield road for the annual picnic and field day. During the forenoon session of the convention the cattle of the Endicott farm, which have been determined the finest in the state, were inspected and judged.

Members of the association were given the opportunity to judge the various cows and prizes were awarded to those who proved the best judges. The prizes were awarded to Mr. Faye Myers, of Grand Blanc, Mr. George Dean, and Mr. Frank Dean, of Albion, and Mr. Roberts Holmes, of Coopersville.

Luncheon was served at tables placed about the grounds of the estate, following which the en-

YOUNGEST AUTO THIEF ARRESTED

Sergt. Anderson Nabs 12-Yr.-Old Boy With Stolen Car

Probably the youngest auto thief ever arrested in Bloomfield Hills was picked up by Sergt. Deion Anderson last Thursday noon. Sergt. Anderson noticed a plates, and overtook it. He took the boy, who was only 12 years old, a resident of Detroit, back to the Hills police station.

After questioning, the boy admitted that he had stolen the car the night before from the lot of the Hillwood Auto Company, of Detroit. He was turned over to Harry L. Smith, of the Detroit Police auto squad, who with a representative of the auto company, identified the car.

The boy had been hanging around the salesroom for some time, the auto representative told Hills police. No one at the salesroom was aware that he could operate a car, and police found he has no operator's license.

LAST RITES HELD FOR MISS WHITING

Former Resident Of Village Buried At St. Clair, Her Birthplace

Services were held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Robert Mason, 216 Hawthorn road, for Miss Hattie Mae Whiting, of Chestnut Hill, Mass., until last October a resident of Birmingham for three years. Miss Whiting died in Chestnut Hill Saturday, and the body was brought to Birmingham by her nephew, Albert Whiting Wasey. Clarence J. Whiting, Christian Science reader, officiated at the service.

Miss Whiting leaves three sisters, Mrs. Mason, Mrs. Harlow Daveck, of Birmingham, and Mrs. Alexander Raymond of Detroit. One brother William Whiting, of Shells Mills, N. C., also survives. Miss Whiting was born in St. Clair, where the burial also took place.

MOVE TO CHICAGO
Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Park street and her son, Stuart, a Freshman student at Adams Junior High School, left Friday for Glenn, Ill., where they will join Mr. Shell. His business with the Wichita Shell Shoe Company was transferred to Chicago last fall, and the family will make their permanent home in Glenn, Ill., a suburb of Chicago.

Honoring Stuart, Donald Stewart entertained at luncheon at his Park street home Thursday noon. Joy Stewart, Stoddard White, and Elizabeth White were the guests.

The guests also were entertained in honor of Stuart by Stoddard White, Brookside Drive, at dinner Thursday evening.
