Speaking of KICKS
If a college man buttfools you and asks, "Do you want a pair of real kicks?" don't be disturbed. It's not a threat. It's simply his quaint way of recommending to you his favorite style of Florsheim Shoes. College men know shoes. Their verdict is—"You get a real kick when you buy Florsheims—and I don't mean maybe!"

The Marine Band

PRESIDENT JOHN ADAMS, in 1788, approved a bill which created the Marine Corps. This corps included a musical division which has since developed into what we now know as the United States Marine Band—often referred to as "The President's Own" band.

Philadelphia was the original headquarters of the corps, because that city was the capital of the nation at that time. The capital and the band were moved to Washington in 1800, ever since which this most ancient of military bands has played an enviable role in the life of our national capital.

This band has played at the White House receptions every New Year's day since 1801. It played at the first inaugural ball on March 4, 1809, and at practically every inaugural ball since that time; it played at the White House on September 6, 1825, when General Lafayette was the nation's guest and was present when Lincoln made his historic Gettysburg speech; it played at the egg-rolling contest on the White House lawn, at the White House wedding of Nellie Grant and Alice Roosevelt and at the funerals of Presidents Taylor, Lincoln, McKinley and Harding.

The versatility of this world-famous organization is unusual. At a grand concert in 1924 it appeared as a symphony orchestra in the first part and a military band in the second part.

That "the music of a nation expresses its soul," it "interprets its history, its religion, its patriotism and its social customs, as do few single mediums" has been most aptly illustrated by our Marine band.
