Oh, For A Brick

He (meeldy)—You know, dear,
I've been thinking over our argument and I've decided to agree
She (tartly)—Well, it won't do you any good: I've changed my mind.—Pathfinder.

Explicit Pop—What do you want for our birthday, son? Son—A piece of rope. Pop—A piece of rope? Son—Ves. sig. with a big sled ed to it.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Well, If You Can Afford It— Magistrate—Prisoner, you are larged with habitual drunken-iss. What excuse have you to ness. What excuse have you to offer? Offender (brightly)—Habit-ual thirst, your honor.

eat my peas with honey I've done it all my life
hey do taste kind of funny,
But it keeps them on the knife.
