

Where Food Shopping is An Adventure

The little gate that lets you into your Groceteria is the door to Adventure Land.

People wander from one fascinating array of "goodies" to another, in Groceterias, with the actual enthusiasm of youngsters turned loose in a pantry. And withstand temptation about as well; for they buy and buy and buy!

You can see scores of untired mothers and excited happy kiddies any day in your Groceteria. Here little folks never fidget while mother waits for a clerk, 'cause mother never waits for a clerk. She chooses her things herself—nationally famous things she reads about in her magazines—and goes happily on her way.

Villagers and the Village

By THE WANDERER

Since writing our story about this year and Birmingham followers of Isaac Walton, "The Compleat Angler," are cordially invited to enjoy the fishing there this summer by Robert D. Lynd, secretary of the Birmingham "Y." A few boats and tents are already available Mr. Lynd says.

A great many of the caddies at the nearby golf courses this year are drawn from the ranks of the school children of Berkeley whose institutions of learning had to be closed because of economic conditions.

Four wing-clipped geese, yielding to the wanderlust, have walked away from their pleasant home at the Cranbrook Sanctuary and now are being sought by W. Bryant Tyrrell, naturalist at the Cranbrook Museum. If you happen to see these birds, singly, in pairs, or all together, you are requested to notify Mr. Tyrrell.

Philanthropy, Not So Easy, Druggist Finds

This business of philanthropy is a never-to-be-completely accomplished process that requires endless wealth and an adamant heart. Ask Mr. Ralph Wilson, the next time you're in his drug store.

Several days ago, Mr. Wilson, as well as other druggists in the community, announced that he would be giving away free, to all boys born in 1918, a number of cameras, gifts of a well-known Rochester, N. Y., manufacturer.

The day of the distribution, the doors of Mr. Wilson's store were opened at 7 a. m. and boys began to line up. By eight o'clock all the cameras were gone and there were still several sad little boys in line. Mr. Wilson was perplexed, but by no means adamant. He announced that he would give away more cameras in a few days.

Then he went out and purchased 50 more cameras.

Again, the store was opened early, and several little boys were there for the opening. In a few minutes there were more boys. Their number increased and the cameras decreased. Within an hour, all the boys had signed their names and their parents names to prove they were qualified to enter a contest of photography and receive the cameras.

But there were still sad little boys in line. Mr. Wilson then realized he could not supply the entire village. He found it difficult, however, to say that there were no more cameras for distribution.
