

"HOW MUCH SHALL I GIVE?"

Some time during the next seven days you are going to be asked to contribute to the fund now being raised to maintain the work of the Community House for another year.

One of the public-spirited men and women who constitute the campaign committee will call at your home or place of business to tell you what the Community House is doing.

You will learn how the Community House is preventing hunger from stalking into homes where wage earners have been out of work for months.

You will learn how babies are being supplied with milk — how the community nurse is bringing hope and courage into some of those little weather-beaten cottages you pass without a glance.

You will hear how employment has been found for hundreds — how thousands of garments have been distributed — how, on countless occasions, a steadying hand has been extended when somebody's courage was ebbing low.

Then you will hear — if you wish — the cheerful side of the story: the side that has to do with laughter and sunshine and the ring of happy children's voices.

And while you are listening, you're going to be making up your mind in answer to the inevitable question, "How much shall I give?"

No one can answer that but you.

WE KNOW that "times are hard" — but think of those whose condition verges on actual tragedy.

WE KNOW there are other demands on your generosity — but no cause is more worthy than one which cares for people whose homes you can almost actually see from your own.

WE KNOW you have already aided the Community House — but that was for the erection of an adequate building, and its good work must be kept going.

So we ask you to give — AND GIVE GENEROUSLY — because the need is so pressing.

We ask you to give — AND GIVE GENEROUSLY — because the community expects it of you.

We ask you to give — AND GIVE GENEROUSLY — because someone will suffer if you don't.

For every reason — human reasons, practical reasons, social reasons, reasons of pride, judgment, co-operation, duty — give! — give all you possibly can.

COMMUNITY HOUSE
ANNUAL MAINTENANCE
ROLL CALL
MAY 19th TO 29th

"KEEP THE GOOD WORK GOING"