TAKE CARE NOT TO KILL TREES WHEN BUILDING. Thousands of beautiful trees are needlessly killed each year during building and grading operations. Whenever the ground around new homes is graded, the trees are endangered unless precautions are taken.

If the elevation of the ground is lowered, the rock there are exposed to the sun and frost and are killed. If the elevation is raised, the danger is even greater. The roots must have air in order to live and when they are covered with a blanket of heavy earth, they are smothered. When the roots die, the tree dies too. Many people believe that a well of abundant large blooms of rich coloring.

Plant an oak tree somewhere on the premises. These are very slow growing trees and few wish to bother with the task of planting generations will benefit by your thoughtfulness now.

DELPHINIUMS (LARKSPURS) The larkspur is especially valuable because of its rich blues. There are also white varieties and a red species. The taller growing annual varieties reach a height of 30 inches and are valuable for bedding and borders as well as for cut flowers. There are other varieties only about 18 inches high that are even better for bedding. There are both single and double forms of the annual larkspurs. In addition to these there are many perennial varieties that will bloom the first year from seed and can be used as annuals with reasonable satisfaction. These vary in height from 18 inches to five feet. Larkspurs are easily grown, but do best in a rather cool moist soil. The seeds of the annuals may be sown in the open ground either in late fall or in early spring. As the seedlings grow they should be thinned to stand from six to 18 inches apart, depending upon the variety. Some species bloom both early and late, and the blooming period of all can be prolonged by removing the withered flower stems promptly.

SUGGESTIONS MADE FOR ROSE GROWERS If flower gardens mean "roses" to you, as they do to most people, you'll be interested in the helpful suggestions made by successful rose growers.

First, grow your roses from good stock, and in a bed of their own where they'll get plenty of sunlight.

A fine, crumbly soil gives the best drainage and insures deep rooting.

If the soil is of the stiff clay type, loosen it up by adding sand or sifted ashes.

Always spade the soil well. After the roses are growing well, cultivate around them often.

Soak the soil thoroughly once or twice a week, preferably after sundown.

Feed your roses regularly with a complete plant food. They must have food. Most soils are deficient in several of the different elements that roses must get from this source for sturdy development and an abundance of beautiful blooms.

There are scientific plant foods on the market that are clean, odorless, and easy to use. If you choose the brand of a reliable manufacturer and use it regularly according to the simple directions which come with each package, you can be reasonably sure

FROM TEE TO GREEN

By ROY GROVE

"Why doesn't Joe Kirkwood win a championship? It should be easy for him. He can make a golf ball do a thousand tricks," is a constant question of golfers.

But it is not so easy for Joe. The Australian star can do many things with a golf ball. He can make it hook and slice at will; he can knock them a mile straight up in the air, or he can slam them far down the course. But—

Kirkwood contends that the hardest shot in golf for him to make is a straight ball—the shot that makes champions.

It is easy enough for Kirkwood to stand on the tee and say, "Here is a slice and here is a hook," but when he tells the gallery that he is going to hit one straight down the fairway—well that's a different story.

There is another phase to Kirkwood's trick shot, in comparison to competitive golf, and that is, he is not shooting at any mark in particular.

He can tee the shot up for his trick plays. They play from where they lie in competition.

The trick game and the championship game are two different games—mentally. The first is a tight train, the other loose and free.

Kirkwood is a specialist in trick play and should spend as much time in developing his golf for the professional games, as he does for exhibition, he would probably be just as great in medal or match play.

Mrs. L. Groves, of Birmingham, spent Sunday at the Pontiac hospital, visiting Miss Grace E. Groves, who has scarlet fever.

Mrs. N. C. Orr attended the community attended "Melody Night" Wednesday evening. Mrs. Saul Burnkrant and Mrs. Harold Howlett were joint hostesses.

Stuart K. Baker, principal of Big Beaver school, has noted many new families entering the community while taking the school census. He will finish the census report by May 31.

The girls' base ball team defeated Log Cabin Nine twice last week, the last score being 13 to 7.

The boys' last to Leonard last Tuesday, the score being 7 to 8. They will meet Auburn Heights next week.

UNIVERSITY STUDENTS AGAIN STUDY GERMAN

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 22—German as a subject for study in our colleges and universities is once more coming into its own. One of the results of the great War was a very sharp decline in the study of German, and even its discontinuance in many high schools. Students who once flocked to classes in German took up French and Spanish which, up to that time, had been seriously neglected.

The result is, that while interest in the romance languages still continues, the number of students who are studying German once more is increasing every year. At present there are more than 1,500 students enrolled in German classes in the University.

According to Professor John W. Eaton, head of the Department of German, this is, numerically, a large increase over the pre-war enrollment although the percentage of students is lower than it was 17 years ago.

There are many causes for this swing back to the study of German.

man, Professor Eaton points out. In the first place, a knowledge of German is necessary for the advanced student because of the many scientific and scholarly publications in that language. The richness of German literature and the growing friendship and sympathy for the German people also have their influences. Moreover, the German ancestry of so many American citizens has, unquestionably, played a part in this revival. The result should be a better balance in the study of German, French and Spanish than existed before the War, when German was over-emphasized, and the years immediately after the War, when German was neglected.
