SHUBERT DETROIT
The "Hell's Angels" discussed by Howard Hughes, will be shown at the Shubert-Detroit Opera House next Sunday night, Oct. 5. It is one of the greatest spectacles the screen has yet seen among aviation films.

The glory really belongs to the cameramen and the airmen. The cameramen risked their lives to bring these thrilling scenes to the screen.

The giant Zeppelin is a real one, built especially for Mr. Hughes under the supervision of Dr. K. Arnstein of Germany and there are some marvelous close-ups inside its huge frame. The precision of the German officers, the stocks of shining bombs and the rhythm of the pistons are exciting almost as the final destruction of the giant ship. The bombing of a huge German munitions depot is a great thrill followed by a sensational dog-fight between the German and the American.

British with 50 planes or more in combat simultaneously. Practically all the incidents of "Hell's Angels" are based on actual occurrences during the World War. When "Hell's Angels" was finally completed it had cost approximately $4,000,000. More than 20,000 planes had taken part in its making and more than 3,000,000 feet of film had been run through the cameras.

DETROIT CIVIC THEATER
The Detroit Civic Theater will open its 1930-31 season on Tuesday night, Oct. 7th, with "The Rivals," Richard Brinsley Sheridan's famous comedy, presented by Miss Jessie Bonstelle in commemoration of the 155th anniversary of the original production in Covent Garden, London. Miss Bonstelle will enact the part of the famous Mrs. Malaprop, of gross linguistic attraction. This is the second time she has played a part in "The Rivals" when she was 17 she played the role of Lydia Languish.

Miss Bonstelle has obtained the assistance of Percival Vivian acting almost as the final destruction of the giant ship. The bombing of a huge German munitions depot is a great thrill followed by a sensational dog-fight between the German and the American.

the role of Bob Acres in the Civic Theater production. Despite the fact that it has been over a century and a half since the first "Rivals" was produced, it still maintains the reputation for being one of the greatest comedies ever written in English. The said humor conceived by the genius of Sheridan, has a freshness and vitality that the passing years fail to dull.

The Detroit Civic Theater commences its season in the new building, Hunter Gardner, George Macready, Walter Sherwin, Kalmar Maresh, Freda, Eugene Webber, Elizabeth Dana, Steve Natsoff, Royden Whitehead, Helena Stungo. The new members are Nell O'Malley, who was with Miss Bonstelle several seasons ago, Thyra Rowland, a young California wide experience on stage and Joan Madison who also been with the Bonstelle company before.

The box office is now open season reservations and the chance of script books.

"Choose neither woman nor linen by candle light," an old proverb, applies as the text of the story.

WILSON THEATER
Arthur Hammerstein's "Sweet Adeline," a colorful and charming musical romance, will begin its run at the Wilson Theater next Monday night, Oct. 6. Capacity enthusiastic audiences journeyed to his handsome Broadway playhouse, Hammerstein's for 10 months last season and found something to rejoice in besides mediocre airs and nudgy Jerome Kern's melodies of "Here Am I," "Why Was I Born," "The Sun Shout to Rise," "Tweed Not So Long Ago," and others, and Oscar Hammerstein, 2nd's story was like reading a good book.

The cast is composed of such high lights in the theater as Helen Oakley, Grace Atwell, and Morgan, Irene Franklin, and Charles Butterworth, James Thornhill, Hans Roberts, Beatrice Kay, Paul Davis, Robert Fisher, Evelyn James, Lon Price, Helen Auld, James H.
