Law Asks Severe Penalty For Delinquent Taxpayer

With 1931 winter taxes now payable, and with many property owners tempted to "let their bills slide for a year," tax authorities here have pointed out that aside from the considerations of citizenship which make prompt payments the duty of every land owner, especially when the schools are in such financial stress, a purely practical aspect of the matter makes it of primary interest to the taxpayer himself not to allow his taxes to go delinquent.

Penalties exacted for late payments, even a few months after they first become due, make it actually less expensive for the property owner to borrow money with which to pay his taxes rather than allow them to go unpaid, and delay of more than a year means a burden, continually growing, from which the property owner will relieve himself only at a severe monetary sacrifice.

No penalty whatever is exacted for taxes paid before Jan. 10. On that date a 4 percent fee is charged, which remains until the rolls are returned to the county treasurer on Mar. 1, and which then becomes a part of the tax bill itself.

More Penalties

At the same time an additional 4 percent fee is added, making an aggregate penalty of 8 percent. Besides this, three-quarters of 1 percent per month is charged until the bill is paid, as well as an extra charge of $1 for each description on the bill.

The rolls are held by the county treasurer for two years, the three-quarters of 1 percent penalty being added each month. Thus, at the end of two years, the original bill will have increased by the initial 4 percent, plus 18 percent added Mar. 1, plus 18 percent applied in 24 monthly installments of three-quarters of 1 percent each.

On May 1, two years and about five months after the bill first became payable, the unpaid tax lists are offered for sale. If not purchased by a tax title buyer, they are held in the name of the state.

Redemption Period

If purchased by a tax title buyer, he holds the land for a one-year redemption period, during which time the original owner may retrieve his property by the payment of a 10 percent penalty added to all other penalties applied in the meantime.

If the title is not retrieved by the original owner within the year, the tax title buyer must serve the owner with a notice of warning, thus perfecting his title. Any time within six months after the notice has been served, the original owner may still retrieve his property, but this time the additional penalty exacted by the tax title buyer may be anything up to 100 percent of the total tax bill. If not paid within the six months, the original owner loses all claim to his property.

If, when offered for sale, a title is not purchased by a tax title buyer, but is "bid in" by the state, the state holds it for three years, adding a penalty of 1 percent each month until the original owner makes application to pay the tax. If he makes no application within the five-year period, the land passes into the state's ownership.

Cheaper To Borrow

From these facts it can easily be seen that borrowing money to pay taxes is a much more economical procedure than allowing them to go delinquent.

For instance, if a person's tax bill is $100, he saves $1.16 by borrowing the money at 7 percent interest rather than waiting until Mar. 1 to pay it, since on Jan. 10 the bill became $104 through the 4 percent penalty, and on Mar. 1 was raised to $108.16 by the addition of the second 4 percent charge.

From that point on for the next two years, the original bill of $100 continues to grow through the addition of penalties of three-quarters of 1 percent each month, and the saving represented by the person who borrowed the money to pay his taxes increases accordingly.

If the taxpayer allows his bill to go unpaid for more than two years, this saving becomes a matter of considerable importance, even to the small land owner.

It is estimated that Peru has 10,000,000 sheep, 1,500,000 alpacas and 500,000 llamas, and the annual clip is about 14,200,000 pounds, more than half alpaca.
