

H.S. and H.A.

When the rose lifts its head above the thorns that look beneath it, do you suppose it grows down from the thorns with its thorns? Or doesn't it feel grateful for the pointed protection of its sheltered stem?

It's possible that another brief quarter of a century from the present the flag of the Civil War veterans is restored to his Maker and our Old Soldiers' home will be occupied by the men who now pleaded for their adjusted compensations. The ranks of the Blue and Gray are thinning, but a memory now. Nor is it an original observation on our part. Yet, it is a public print during the past week brought to our attention. One was from the title uniform he wore as a picture of the West Point where a picture of the gallant Robert E. Lee, in the title uniform he wore as an officer of the Union Army before the conflict, has been restored to the other camp by the Confederate Soldiers' Home at Atlanta, Ga., where a noble act was gratefully recognized by Alex. H. Gray, of Patchogue, Long Island, a veteran of the Union Army, bequeathed his pension to the same with the simple explanation: "They need it more than I do."

There are so many remarkable things about a decision of the court that support it, it purposely avoids them in its recounting of the phenomena of the facts and facts. It is the cards come under the heading of "The Minkido" and it seems that in the physiology of the face cards. Did you ever notice, for instance, the great sweep to the moustache on the Jack of Spades? or the petulant expression on the four queens as the ace and the fourth, full-face?

Then, too, we believe a revival of the purest type of musical comedy, as we have seen, that raised opera to the heights of opera in "The Mikido" and it seems that in the physiology of the face cards. Did you ever notice, for instance, the great sweep to the moustache on the Jack of Spades? or the petulant expression on the four queens as the ace and the fourth, full-face?

Yesterday we learned that Patrolman Henry Timm rescued four, and not three persons, in the near-escape fire on the morning of Jan. 28. After he had brought the two children and the housekeeper from the burning building, Patrolman DeWitt Service, and Jimmy Dolan, head-man of the "Detroit Detectives," were called to save what little furniture they could from the burning building.

Several articles were removed successfully from the front door. In the meantime, we suppose, firemen in the several departments Timm had called, battled with their consciences instead of the flames before the Clawson firemen arrived in time to concede the victory to Detroit.

Before they arrived, however, Timm and his comrades decided to save the piano. Timm pushed the piano and the other furniture instrument across the parlor floor. The back wall of the room was weakened. Timm and his comrades were there, spreading their destruction. The piano was carried out by the casters caught on the sill, and Service Officer Timm, and Service Officer Dolan, and Service Officer Timm, screamed in terror. Other on-lookers were also screaming in terror. Thick of the smoke, stood by in that form, imbecility which characterized most witnesses of tragedies. Timm might have escaped through the window. But the flames were dangerously near it.

Admitting the importance of that the chain grocery stores operator in the State of Michigan, it is very funny, "said Timm. "It was very funny," said Timm. "It was very funny," said Timm.

At the Detroit Institute of Arts the other day, many cultured women and their husbands were present at the greatest art, listened to the greatest patriotic address by a learned orator. She pleaded the cause of the American composer. She urged a keener study and appreciation of the art of the struggling musician today. Enthusiasm was rife. There was prolonged applause. The "Detroit Institute of Arts" was very poorly, of course.

The program, an "all-Russian program." Mrs. S. S. Marquis plans to

Firemen Arrive Too Late To Save Jansons

Passing Motorist Warns Family; Barn And Adjacent Building Saved By Bloomfield Department

Damage estimated at tentatively $8,000 was caused by fire which razed the home of W. H. Janson, manufacturer, at the northeast corner of Maple and Franklin roads yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. E. E. Janson, her son, Chester, 20 years old, and the family cook, Isiah Gill, were in the house when a passing motorist noticed flames coming through the roof in the front of the house. He had difficulty in attracting the attention of the family and Mrs. Janson turned in an alarm to the Birmingham Department. The alarm was received at 1:20 p. m. but the firemen told her to call the Bloomfield Township Fire Department because they were prohibited from answering calls outside of the village.

The property is owned by Miss Addie Sly, of Maple road, who is in the Harper Hospital recovering from a minor operation. The occasion marked the third refusal of the department in a few weeks to answer alarms outside of the village.

Remove Some Furniture Mrs. Janson said that none of the contents of the house is insured and estimates his loss in excess of $9,000. Chief Russell Moore of the Bloomfield Hills Village Department, which finally answered the alarm, placed a tentative estimate of $5,000 on the house itself, a two-story, frame dwelling.

Working motorists and neighbors helped to remove some of the furniture but all of the furniture in the second floor was destroyed.

The home of Edward Woodluff next door was slightly damaged by burning embers which landed upon the roof. None of the Woodluff family was home but the property was being cared for by Mrs. Vis Windling, of Detroit.

The Jansons moved into the house in the fall of 1929. The house had been built by the late J. H. Janson, who was engaged in the manufacture of roofing materials.

Although no definite cause of the fire could be determined it is believed a defective chimney was responsible. Ted Thompson, a former occupant of the house, said that it had caught on fire three times while he lived there and that the blazes all had started in the attic near where the flames were first noticed.
