

Mrs. Molla Propp

"I suppose," said MRS. MOLLA PROPP, "that the differential has some use or they wouldn't put it on the engine."

THE GEORGE moved last week up on the hill. I told Gertrude not to trust her glossaire to the MOVEMENT and I would take it up in my car. Well, there she was, sitting in the back seat with a lamp shade on her head, the seat full of dishes, three hairpins in her hands that she said came over to Boston in the Constitution. She's always bragging about her Puritan ancestors, but if they drank out of those things they couldn't have been so much. Anyway, just as I turned the corner I bumped the rear end of a truck. I couldn't see it, I blew my horn, didn't I? You should have seen Gertrude. She went forward and the lamp shade hit the ceiling and then stopped down over her ears. Maybe I shouldn't have started

Listen to Him Swear!
She was sitting in a dark corner. Noiselessly she stole up behind her, and before she was aware of his presence he had kissed her. "How dare you!" she shrieked. "Fardon me," he blurted readily. "I am your sister."—Punch.
