

Mrs. Molla Propp

"I told the man," said MRS. MOLLA PROPP, "to take the spark gap out of the intake."

WHEN I get into a mystery story, I am just too absorbed, my dear. Yesterday I saw one in the library and started reading it. I was just at the point where they were chasing the Mad Mad Horror through a dark cave, when the clock struck five and I had to hurry home to make our dinner. There was the book lying alongside me in the seat, open at the place I got to when I had to run home. I just couldn't help it and one eye sort of wandered down the page while I tried to watch the road with the other. All at once I felt a jar, and there was a car ahead of me with a broken rear light and the driver waved his arm and said, "I was your fault and that I had probably also broken his wheel, sorry, but when I told him how sorry I was he let it go at that. I was doing in a vacation with the car and I never dared to tell him."
