

Rose-Covered Altar Amid Glowing Candles Sets Glancy-Hull Wedding Scene Saturday

Married Saturday afternoon in Christ Church Cranbrook, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Louis Hull (Nora Glancy), after a short wedding trip in the south, will be at home Feb. 1 in Atlanta, Ga. Before an altar banked with brilliant roses and clematis ferns, and lighted by soft-glowing cathedral candles, the simple vows were spoken by Nora Glancy and Richard Hull, to the questions of the age-old ceremony beautifully read by the Rev. Dr. S. S. Marquette. Rich antique ivory satin, touching the floor in front and made with a long sweeping train, styled on extremely simple and lovely lines, gowned the bride, first of the season's debutantes to marry. Chiffon fashioned the deep v-neck, bordered with tiny sprays of orange blossoms which so trimmed the cap from which the billowy tulle veil was draped. Long flowing sleeves distinguished the light-fitting bodice. Slippers of ivory satin matched the bride's dress. Simple gardenias formed her arm bouquet. Carnelian chiffon made with a ruffled cape and no sleeves, gowned Miss Louise Glancy, sister of the bride, who served as maid-of-honor. The skirt was styled with four modified ruffles, reaching the floor, and girdled with a grosgrain ribbon of peach-ice color. Her large carnelian broochlike mian hat was trimmed with a bow of matching velvet ribbon. Slippers were of lestra moire in the same shade. Taisman-butterfly roses in peach color, with gerbera, tied with a shower of ribbon and chiffon, formed her bouquet. Bridesmaids were attired in peach-shade chiffon gowns, with milian hats and crepe shoes in the carnelian. Bouquets were of peach-ice blossoms, carnations, and gerberas. Miss Vaughn Nixon and Miss Carolyn Faulkner, of Atlanta, Ga., Miss Dorothy Vito of New York, and Miss Katherine Watts of Baltimore were bridesmaids. Mrs. A. E. Glancy and Mrs. Marion Hull, mothers of the bride and groom, both wore black chiffon, becomingly. Both also wore shoulder orchids. Miss Glancy was given in marriage by her father, A. R. Glancy. Thomas Hull attended his brother as best man. Guests were ushered to their places by Alfred R. Glancy, Jr., Emory Flynn of New York, Dr. Caldwell Holliday of Atlanta, and Lieut. William Biddle of Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. More than 200 guests attended the reception and supper at the Glancy home, "Hilltop," in Bloomfield Hills, following the ceremony. Spring flowers were used throughout the rooms in the home. Blooming orange trees banked the aisle leading to the ball room. Gardenias, white bouvardie and farlaynase fern, arranged in a low massed effect on a large mirror plaque, decorated the table, and ivory tapers in silver candlesticks gave a soft glow over the table, reminiscent of the chancel and whispered vows. Navy blue wool crepe, with a ruffled silk blouse, under her lace ermine coat, with matching accessories, shoes, gloves, purse and traveling bag, Miss Hull, was chosen by the bride for her traveling costume.
