THE VOICE IN THE SINGING TOWER

Velvety darkness of a summer night—the hush of expectancy—great eyes glowing in the shadows—highlight eyes that have lit the road for many miles bringing people to hear the voice for which all are waiting.

Then—suddenly—the promise fulfilled, the velvet rent by silver, and the voice of the Singing Tower fills the air.

It is the Singing Tower of Christ Church Cranbrook. When the carillon, the voice in the tower, fills the night with melody, those who are listening know that Anton Brees, famous bellmaster, is at the keyboard.

On Wednesday evening every week throughout the summer, Mr. Brees gives a carillon concert at 9 o'clock. Aest at each concert the wide appeal of the great instrument is evidenced by the many people who gather around Christ Church in Bloomfield Hills to hear the music. Long before the hour of the concert, motor cars are parked on every road leading to the church, and in them sit people great in number, an opportunity to hear their cars in the soothing harmony of the bells.

On Wednesday evening every week throughout the summer, Mr. Brees gives a carillon concert at 9 o'clock. Aest at each concert the wide appeal of the great instrument is evidenced by the many people who gather around Christ Church in Bloomfield Hills to hear the music. Long before the hour of the concert, motor cars are parked on every road leading to the church, and in them sit people great in number, an opportunity to hear their cars in the soothing harmony of the bells.

What is a carillon? Let Mr. Brees explain: "An exact definition demands too many details of the technique of tower music. It is enough to say a carillon is a set of bells tuned to the intervals of the chromatic scale through four octaves. The lowest bell often weighs many tons, but in the highest octave the weight of each bell is but a few pounds. All bells hang 'dead' or fixed, so as not to swing."

There may be some confusion in the public mind as to the difference between the chime and the carillon. The chime consists of fewer bells, usually not more than 12, tuned only to the diatonic or major scale. The carillon is played on a keyboard similar to that of a piano or organ, and comprises all notes of the chromatic scale.

Historically the carillon can be traced through the Singing Tower centuries ago in early medieval times, the people of Belgium, the Netherlands and French Flanders erected watchtowers which were continually watched for danger. When the man on guard detected the approach of an enemy or the flooding of the dikes, he summoned the populace by blowing a horn. In time a bell replaced the horn. Came the clock, and bells were used to strike the hour.

More bells were added as the years passed, and the chime was the result. It was during the reign of Charles V, Roman emperor, in the 16th century, that the historic cathedrals of Belgium, the Netherlands and French Flanders began to possess bells tuned to the chromatic scale.

These bells were ancestor to the carillon, which evolved as more bells were added. From the 17th century down, the carillon and Mrs. Ray Denison and family.

Almont; Mr. and Mrs. Del Hildebrand, and Mr. Del Hildebrand, all of Hartland; and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hayes, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Lion, Mr. and Mrs. Hazel Denison, all of Birmingham.

Miss Ada Jane Leeland, formerly of Birmingham, took active part in the two plays given by the Detroit Players here Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Miss Leeland has studied with Miss Honstelle and is active in dramatics in Detroit.

Division No. 3 of the First Presbyterian church will meet Wednesday, July 22, at 2:30 P. M. at the home of Mrs. Dow Ellwood at Hunt and Southfield roads. Mrs. H. S. Roberts is chairman of the division.

The Redeemer Lutheran Church of Birmingham is planning a lawn social for Wednesday evening, July 22. Refreshments and entertainment will be provided.

Anton Brees at the Carillon has voiced the music of the Low Countries, and as it was always played from a belfry, hence the name, "Singing Tower."

But for many years the carillon was not heard outside the boundaries of the ancient lands in which it originated. Until the 19th century the casting of perfectly tuned bells was virtually a lost art even in the Netherlands. Of recent years, however, the knowledge of bell-tuning has been revived in England and with this renewed interest, the world awakes again to the beauty of bell music.

Then the carillon crossed the Atlantic. Anton Brees, bellmaster of Cranbrook, came with his beloved instrument to charm the ears of America's audiences. Not only to charm the ears but to stir the soul and reach the heart, because the carillon has reached the American heart.

And the interpretation of carillon music by Mr. Brees is responsible. He is the pioneer in this country. Anton Brees is a man whose life is closely linked with the instrument he plays. The son of Gustaf Brees, for 50 years the organist in the great Antwerp Cathedral, and now city carillonner, he learned his art from his father.

Antwerp is his native city, and he is Laureate of the Royal Flemish Conservatory. Since 1924 when he came to this country to play the carillon in the First Presbyterian Church in Birmingham, Mr. Brees has opened virtually all the carillons in the United States, which now number more than 40.

In the winter months, Mr. Brees is bellmaster at the Edward Bok Memorial Singing Tower at Mountain Lake, Fla., where he also instructs students in his art. To Mr. Brees, the carillon is the most democratic of all instruments because its appeal is universal and because it belongs to the outdoors.

"I can readily understand why Americans respond so enthusiastically to carillon music," said Mr. Brees. "It is for people in all walks of life. It is democratic. American people love to be outdoors and the carillon seems to them like the music of the outdoors."

"Listening to orchestra music in an auditorium or theater one is surrounded by an environment necessarily artificial. But the carillon seems to sing from the hills tops. It is as near and familiar to the American people as the church bell."

"And what a medium for music it is! On no other instrument can one man be heard over so great an area. Yet one man may play the carillon in 'Singing Tower' and can reach an audience of 100,000 people. That thought is indeed an inspiration to the man at the keyboard."

At the last concert at Cranbrook approximately 8,000 people attended. They not only go in huge numbers, but they take pains to show their carillonous appreciation and enjoyment of his work. Many write letters, others more to tell their unmeasured appreciation and enjoyment of his work. Many write letters, others more to tell their unmeasured appreciation and enjoyment of his work.

Often the letters and notes will continue requests for favorite numbers, and if possible the request is granted. The greatest number of requests is for hymns, such as "The Lord's Prayer," "The Holy Spirit," "The Lord's Prayer," "The Holy Spirit," "The Lord's Prayer," "The Holy Spirit."

"Can a woman play the carillon?" Mr. Brees was asked. "There is nothing a woman can't do nowadays," he replied with a smiling shrug, "but so far she has not attempted it."
