MOTORS BOW TO MERCHANTS

Birmingham Nine Initiates New Diamond With 5 To 1 Victory

Confining all their scoring to the third inning, the Birmingham Merchants counted five runs in that frame and succeeded in downing the Oakland Motors of Pontiac, 5 to 1, in the first game played on the new Baseball diamond at Bloomfield Park Sunday afternoon.

The Motors took a one-run lead in the second inning when Brown's hit mixed in with an infield out and an error to give the Pontiac aggregation its only counter. Gunther, Birmingham flinger, settled down after the second inning and held the Motors to four safeties during the remainder of the game. He struck out nine men over the route.

Johnston and Brown divided the hurling assignment for Pontiac, the latter holding Birmingham scoreless during the last five innings.

Kreger and Becker of Birmingham and Everett and Brown of the Oakland nine lead the batters, each getting two hits in four appearances at the plate.

Educator Urges World To Disregard Prejudices In Solving Difficulties

By DR. LIVINGSTON FARRAND
President of Cornell University

[Dr. Livingston Farrand was born June 14, 1867, at Newark, N. J. He was graduated from Princeton University in 1888, and holds honorary degrees from 14 universities and colleges. He began as an instructor in psychology at Columbia University in 1893, and in 1901 he was chosen as professor. From 1903 to 1914 he acted as professor of anthropology. On January 1, 1914, he was named president of the University of Colorado, and retained this position until 1919. In October, 1921, he was appointed president of Cornell University. Dr. Farrand is an author and a member of several societies and foundations. He makes his home in Ithaca, N. Y.]

THE PEOPLE are facing a torn, confused and baffled world, and it is their duty to help solve its problems.

Dr Farrand

Among these problems are social economic and political maladjustment and inequality in the distribution of wealth.

The "prostitution" of the radio is equal in its possibilities to the introduction of printing, to commercialism and amusement.

We must not scorn, but must study Russia. You must play your part in the light of new conditions. The challenge to the entire existing economic order has got to be met. It is not going to be met by any hasty disregard of the challenge, nor by a prejudiced reliance on tradition. We must think along new lines.

The breakdown of law and order on every side and at the insidious spread of corruption is of grave concern.

Unless these trends are met by a sober, informed and responsible citizenship, they will result in disaster. I am confident they will be met, but that they are being met, I am unable to assert.

An intolerable situation exists when an excess and surplus of production are prevented from meeting the want and even poverty that exists. To disregard the problem and test of economic, social and political maladjustment is unthinkable.

Ketchum Says Cost Of Building Is Now Lowest In Decade

Building was never more feasible for the man who plans to own a home and has some means than today, in the opinion of Bert Ketchum, manager of the Muskegon Building and Loan Association and former treasurer of the Michigan Building and Loan League. Mr. Ketchum views the question from both the standpoint of the potential home owner and the public at large.

"There are a considerable number of people who are uncertain regarding homes of their own," says Mr. Ketchum "but there are likewise thousands who definitely intend to spend their lives where they are now employed and eventually to own homes. Home ownership is fixed i ntheir plans for the future but their plans are vague. The problem involves careful planning and responsibility which they hesitate to assume.

"For those who intend to build or to buy, there certainly is an opportunity today. Real estate is lower than it has been since the building boom of war days started, materins are at bottom prices and high class labor is available. The situation is distnictly the most favorable that it has been in a decade.

"Considering the question of public interest also, building at this time is advisable." Mr. Ketchum says. "It is freely admitted that a revival of interest in what is a staple and is stable is necessary before general business can make a noticeable advance. And residence building fits into that definition better than any investment offered, for theer is less fluctuation in real estate than in any other investment."

TWO MEN FINED ON DISORDERLY CHARGES

John Raubar, 9455 West Fort street, Detroit was fined $100 for disorderly conduct by Judge Floyd S. Buck, Tuesday, following his arrest on Woodward avenue early in the morning by Bloomfield Hills police who said he had been drinking and was driving on the wrong side of the road.

Edward J. Miller of Oxford was fined $100 on a similar charge by Judge Buck Friday. He was also arrested by Bloomfield Hills police.
