From A WOMAN'S ANGLE

By MARJORIE ELAINE PORTER

Let Omar Khayyam have his jug beneath the spreading tree; Give me a tent, an easy chair— And plenty of iced tea!

The most convincing argument in favor of wearing hose is the mosquito.

A 10-year plan!

Miss Marion H. McClench of Ann Arbor, in delivering her presidential address at the annual convention of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women held at Richmond, Va., recently proposed a business reconstruction plan covering a period of 10 years to be followed by her organization.

Here it is: "Launching a comprehensive program of education as to principles, underlying economic conditions; establishment of opportunity for the development of individual capacity with a fair reward for ability shown, whether by men or women; stressing application of scientific methods to human welfare and the use of the vote to promote progress toward social and economic betterment. My what lovely words!"

Well, even if the business depression doesn't last 10 years, the plan ought to.

Twelve million British workers owe thanks to one woman.

She is Miss Margaret Bonfield, minister of labor, and she is preparing a bill under which 12,000,000 British workers will be put on an eight-hour day schedule.

Miss Bonfield's bill will be introduced in Parliament in the fall and will be rushed through as an "emergency" measure. The bill, of course, affects the men workers as well as women.

There must be enough people employed in British industry to warrant such a measure.

Anyway, it's quite a feather in the cap of feminine achievement.

I don't know how you feel about it, but I get a real "kick" out of reading about women who win doing something or other.

Now here is another woman who has succeeded in a career begun to gratify a parental whim. Her father wanted her to have a boy's education.

She is Marianna Beth, Ph. D., LL. D. of Vienna, and she is the first woman to study theology at the University of Vienna, and the first woman to become a doctor of laws in Austria. She served on the faculty of the university, and was the first woman granted that privilege.

She is the mother of two children, and works 10 hours a day.

But she isn't the first mother of two children to work 10 hours a day. At that, some mothers may think she is getting off early.

Speaking of feminine courage, the case of Mrs. Josephine Anderson of San Diego, should not be overlooked.

Lying in bed, recovering from a broken back, Mrs. Anderson was away the hour in correspondence with Miss Gertrude Ross of Los Angeles, who is an invalid.

The two became acquainted through a radio club.

"Come over some afternoon," joyfully wrote Miss Ross.

"All right, I will," replied Mrs. Anderson.

She made a flying visit, and landed safely at the Grand Central Air Terminal in Glendale. Miss Ross met her in an ambulance, and after chatting an hour or two, Mrs. Anderson returned to San Diego via a Stinson tri-motored monoplane.

Don't throw away your old-fashioned wire toaster. Why it's the best thing in the world to broil meat in over the outdoor camp fire, when the family goes out on its regular Saturday afternoon jaunt.

If you don't happen to strike a park where there are charcoal stoves for cooking the steak, get your old toaster out of the camp kit, it is easier to use and so carry than a heavy iron frying pan.

Local Player Wins State Golf Prize

Miss Barbara Hill of Birmingham, representing the Lake Country Club, won the consolation round in the third flight of the women's state golf tournament last week at Oakland Hills, defeating Miss Fredrika Walden and the final match.

Miss Hill was defeated by Miss Josephine Bender of Grand Rapids and in the first round of the tourney, only to play through her next three matches when she was eliminated for the consolation prize.

Sculptures Add To Garden Lure

Fairy elves, whose midnight revels by a forest-side, in some first round of peasant sees, or dreams he sees, while overhead the moon shines brightly—MILTON.

Have you any "fairy elves" in your garden? Not of the sort most people think of when they think of garden ornaments? They add an interesting touch to your grounds by day, and in the moonlight they become ethereal, stealthily waiting for their hour of midnight revel.

We are told by landscape authorities that statues are more difficult to locate properly than any other kind of garden ornament. The reason given is that they represent the highest and most extreme type of garden decoration.

It is always a good taste to have a statue at the side or end of a garden path, near the pool, or in a corner of the shrubbery border. If garden statues, we do not mean large, formal reproductions of sculpture, but the might adorn the gardens of an old chateau.

Very popular are the small reproductions of the little folk that people legends and fairy stories. For the gardener who wishes to add the classical touch, why not a small sculpture of a graceful nymph, or a sportive little dancing faun, or Pan piping some dainty lay.

Wood Figures Popular. Less formal and inexpensive are the little figures of wood, gaily colored to represent anything from an adventurous bunny to a Benjamin H. If placed near a very appropriately be placed near the tulip bed or border.

If you do not fancy this type of garden ornamentation, why not the sun-dial or gazing globe? Or perhaps you might favor the combination bird bath and fountain.

The sun-dial is a universally accepted garden ornament, since its function it must be placed out-of-doors. Familiar as the sun-dial is as a form of garden architecture, there are certain rules which govern the placing of it in the landscape design.

Never, for instance, place a sun-dial in a flower bed, where it would be difficult to read. Remember that the ostensible purpose of the sun-dial is to tell the time of day, and put it in an accessible position. At least, let it give the impression that it is still fulfilling its ancient purpose in spite of its modern rival, the electric clock.

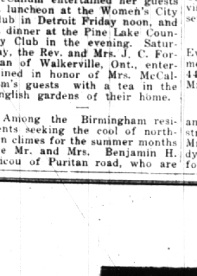

As a rule, sun-dials are placed on pedestals, which provide ideal central figures at the crossing of garden paths or in the middle of a lawn. Vertical dials can also be placed on the south side of buildings.

Resembling a huge Christmas-tree ornament perched on a pedestal and growing in the garden the same as the evergreen tree it is waiting to adorn, is the gazing-globe or ball coated with mercury. The mercury coating on the inside gives the outer surface the appearance of a mirror which reflects the objects around it. A very pretty garden ornament.

Attracting Birds. The gazing-globe may be placed with artistic accuracy in about the same position as a sun-dial. It is very good at an intersection of garden walks. Another favorable thing about the gazing-globe as a garden ornament, is that its brightness attracts the birds. The globe was given its name by magicians of old, who claimed to be able to read the future in its crystal depths.

As to your own garden, suit yourself in the manner of ornamentation. But for the touch of life, to give animation to the most passive garden scene, let the little figures of stone or marble, bronze or wood, people your garden world.
