1931 Attendance At State Parks Grows

Lansing.—With the advance of summer and the arrival of hot weather, state parks in both the upper and lower peninsulas are filling up with campers, visitors and bathers.

Several of the parks have reported attendance higher than for the corresponding period last year and the Parks Division of the Department of Conservation is looking for a year's attendances exceeding that of 1930.

During the week ending June 20, for instance, the Bay City State Park reported an attendance of 174,000 people as compared with 92,400 for the same week a year ago. During the same week 73,000 people visited the Island Lake State Park near Brighton.

MERCHANTS, MOTORS PLAY HERE, SUNDAY

The new baseball diamond at Bloomfield Township Park will be initiated Sunday with a game between the Birmingham Merchants and the Oakland Motor nine of Pontiac.

The Merchants tangled with Rochester last Sunday at Rochester, but were rained out at the end of the fourth inning before either team had scored.

(More brief notes from the adventures of an Eccentric reporter who is now on a four-month tour of European countries.)

All praise to the Hotel Come in Milan—it was the first place in Europe where we were able to get real cream with coffee. So noted is this difficulty that we marked a letter to the editor of the Paris edition of the New York Herald, in which an irate American asked if all that the cows in France gave was sour skim milk.

Since it is almost impossible to get milk which would convert the hot milk served with chocolate or coffee, the Italians patronize what are known as "latte-ras," for which we in America have no exact duplicate. Here are sold milk by the glass and by the bottle, all sorts of egg dishes, hot cream, nonalcoholic drinks, and coffee. Incidentally tubercular testing of cows is practically unknown, and travelers are therefore wary of milk, at least in the Latin countries.

After having seen the initials "E. A." on coats of official bulletins and orders around the office of The Eccentric, it was something of a surprise to find them everywhere carved in wood and formed in grillwork in the Carthusian monastery of Fontevraud some 15 miles out from Milan. It was found, however, that they were the initials for the Latin name of the publisher of the largest weekly in Milan.

The monastery, which has had a long and varied history, is now a national monument, administered and partially run by the restored by the State Department of Public Education. It was one of the wealthiest monasteries in existence at its time, and is a veritable treasure-house of beautiful paintings, carved wood and stone, iron grillwork, and inlaid ivory and ebony. For this reason also, it was a storm-center of complaints that the prayers and religious duties of the Carthusian monks were interfered with by frequent visits of European princes.

A most amusing article in one of the weekly industrial papers of the Lombardy region, published at Milan, was shown us by Homer Brett, the American consul. It was in the form of a lengthy article editorially complaining of the new law forbidding the use of electric signs. It occupied fully three columns and was signed by the city fathers who promoted such a law, and finished with a neck paragraph which admitted that notice had been received from the city offices that there was no such law. Evidently the rhetorical editorial had been thought too good a masterpiece to be left out, however, for a notice it was published of a small box regretting that lack of space had forced the editors to

He Trimmed Cochet

He is Nigel Sharpe, little known British player, who started the tennis fever when he defeated Henri Cochet, the brilliant French star, in the first round of the Wimbledon championships in London. The match was 6-1, 3-2, 6-2.

Though most people refuse to believe it and consider it a joke whenever mentioned, there is actually in existence a Swiss navy. The little locked-out country maintains a considerable fleet of fast patrol boats on the navigable stretches of the Rhine and on its lakes for combating smuggling. I saw several of these ships of the Confederation and can swear to their existence.

New Ball Diamond To Open Sunday; No. 2 Green To Be Moved

Alterations and improvements at Bloomfield Township Park which have been in the course of construction for several weeks will bear fruit Sunday when the new baseball diamond north of the club house will be opened to use for the first time.

The old diamond south of the club house is being abandoned to make more room on the golf course. Eventually the green for the second hole will be located on the old diamond, although this new layout will not be ready for play until next year, according to Harry A. Vaughan, township supervisor.

It is estimated that the new layout will widen the fairways of both the second and third holes about 50 yards each, and lengthen the second hole now 162 yards, to more than 200 yards. The new baseball diamond is located on the lot immediately adjoining the north side of the club house.

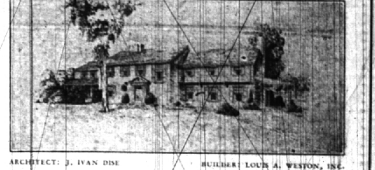

Mr. Harry estimated the cost of the alterations to the township at not more than $30, since most of the work is being done by volunteer labor.

HOT IRON CAUSES ALARM
