VACATION IN MICHIGAN

From A WOMAN'S ANGLE

By MARJORIE ELAINE PORTER

I suppose you've heard that Glenna Collett, former women's national golf champion, was married to E. H. Vane, Jr., of Philadelphia, in Greenwich, Conn., June 24.

And now Glenna will have to tee for two.

Even fashion-biase Paris received a jolt recently when a popular young woman of the stage appeared in a cafe wearing a bare head entirely of fresh violets.

Not such an expensive idea at that, if you raise your own flowers. Go out in your garden and pick your hat!

Joking aside though, girls fresh flowers as accessories are very smart at continental resorts, we are told.

Over here, we're all going Ophelia.

The latest thing for evening wear. Just twine fresh flowers in the hair.

Are we getting sentimental or extravagant?

What do you talk about? That is, most of the time.

Next to, "Who's going to have the car tonight?" What is the favorite topic of conversation at your dinner table?

A young Birmingham woman was heard to remark recently that she would rather talk to men than women because they talked about "more interesting things."

But do they? Like the high school debater, all we can say is "Statistics show that..."

Young men and women of today talk about approximately the same things at their stag gatherings.

We owe this information to the Journal of Social Psychology of Ohio State University.

In an experiment that extended over the period of a year, psychology students were told to report on topics of conversation of sorority girls, fraternity men, and non-members of sororities.

Now here's something that may surprise you.

Clothes accounted for 4.2 percent of the conversations of men, 3.6 percent among the sorority women, and 6 percent among the "sorority women," the report said.

Interest in "dates" was about equal among both men and women. The men showed twice as much interest in drinking as the sorority women and four times as much as the dormitory women. The same percentage was true of sports.

Way down the scale came discussed, the least of all topics discussed.

And now we'd like to ask the young woman who said men talked about more interesting things, what she considers "interesting things."

Bright conversation should not be confused with light conversation.

Mrs. Eugenia Bankhead-Hoyt-Burt-lee-White of Hollywood, married six times. And she says she is just an "incurable optimist."

We'd suggest a revised marriage ceremony omitting "till death us do part." Why not be honest!

When you and your husband have arguments, who averages the highest winning score? The one who loses the argument, usually by the one who gets mad first. Men seem to have firmly fixed in their minds the idea that there is no use arguing with a woman.

But it isn't fair to generalize. There are just as many men who, failing to convince in an argument, resort to profanity or some other expression of anger, as there are women who, for the same reason, burst into tears.

Because of this some men feel that argument is futile, and stubbornly refuse to talk matters over.

In this case, the wife is left to do all the talking, which in the masculine mind, comes under the category of nagging.

But many times the wife is seeking only to find an explanation or to arrive at a conclusion.

Problems have never been solved either by nagging or by moody silence and childish sullessness. When the nations of the world are turning more and more to arbitration to settle their difficulties, why can't individuals solve theirs by the same method?

They could, if they would use the same principles—diplomacy instead of bluntness, and a courteous defensive rather than an angry attack.

Here are some rules of argument as outlined by Albert E. Wiggam, psychologist and author, writing in a national magazine. If followed, they might lead to perpetual matrimonial harmony through more complete understanding. Well, anyway, try them on your husband:

1. "Don't try to do all the talking. Remember your opponent wants to talk just as badly as you do. Give the other fellow a chance."

2. "Don't interrupt your opponent's talk with a counter-argument."

3. "Do not assume an argumentative, dogmatic attitude. Don't wear boxing gloves."

4. "Ask questions in a pleasant, inquiring tone of voice—during the first half of the argument."

5. "Restate clearly and fairly in a very few words the gist of each argument your opponent advances as soon as he advances it."

6. "When you reply, stick hard to the subject. Bring out the key issue and stick to it. Don't digress and do not let your opponent digress."

7. "My advice is, before you start an argument, be sure of your facts!"

Banish Fatigue

Joyz Mate is the delicious and stimulating drink of the Argentine gauchos who derive remarkable physical strength and stamina from its constant use. Preferred by millions of South Americans to coffee. Joyz Mate is a refreshing tonic beverage which helps banish fatigue, revive drooping spirits and produces a feeling of lightness and energy. The beautiful senioritas of Argentina attribute their sleek and girlish figures to the daily use of Joyz Mate. The great Charles Darwin said—"Mate... the ideal stimulant." It comes from sunny plantations in South America and is quickly made in a percolator. Delicious hot or ICED.

WOMEN WHO PLAY FAIR...

Had she the right to preach?

No sooner had the words left her mouth than she realized her mistake. "A loan is not a gift," she had said, when her Peggy wanted to keep Mary's doll.

Then, suddenly, she remembered the bills on the table—long past due. Had she the right to preach?

Only that morning she had received a letter from one of her creditors and had lightly tossed it aside. Now she re-read it, with thoughtful eyes...

"Dear Mrs. B...." the letter read. "We are sorry to trouble you about the balance on your account, but it is to the benefit of both of us that we reach an understanding."

"We realize, of course, that many things may have conspired to make it difficult to take care of this, and we are only too glad to offer our help."

"But in many cases, we find that people put off paying their bills... or forget them... or find more immediate uses for their money. If they realized just how much their credit means to them, we feel sure that they'd be more eager to keep it!"

"Please remember, though, that we are anxious and willing to help you."

"If circumstances do not permit your prompt payments, please let us know. Like so many other women, you would probably find our new booklet helpful in your use of credit. It is entitled,

"How to Use Credit to Your Best Advantage." Write for it and we will send it to you without cost."

Let us help you, too, as we have helped so many others. Rid yourself of worries about bills, and use your credit freely with a happy mind.
