Nursery School Head Aims To Teach Children To Care for Themselves

Tucked down under the trees at 4339 Willits street is a little house, its inside rooms painted in pale blue and filled with miniature tables and chairs in brighter colors, its walls lined with blackboards, its floors strewn with toy trains, wagons and blocks, and its back yard filled with teeter-totters sand piles and swings.

Just a great big playhouse, you'd say. And you'd be right, too, for it's one of those retreats for children called a nursery school that are so common in Europe but are still something of a novelty in America.

Even this school is closely allied with the European tradition for it is conducted by a woman who for eight years was connected with similar schools in Hamburg, Germany, where they are all under government supervision.

Teaches Child to Play

She is Mrs. Herta Feldmann, who came to this country only three years ago, first settling in Detroit and later coming to Birmingham. For a year she was employed at a nursery school conducted by Miss Gertrude Burns at the corner of Brown and Bates streets, and about four months ago embarked on a similar venture of her own.

The object of the school is to teach children how to play, Mrs. Feldmann says, which sounds a bit strange in view of the common opinion that children can play without being taught.

"But most children don't know how to play—really," Mrs. Feldmann insists. Especially if they have no brothers and sisters, they have to be taught how to really enjoy themselves, and—which is still more important—how to get along with other children.

Little Routine Training

"Usually grown-ups are too apt to rule children with don'ts.' Here they are left to come and go as they please. There is very little routine training and the emphasis is on positive rather than negative development of the child.

"What I try to do is to teach the children to get along by themselves without help from older people."

Each child at the school has his own towel and wash rag, his own soap his own tooth brush, etc., and on each article is pasted the symbol or "trade mark" of the individual to whom it belongs. Jimmy's things, for instance, may be marked with a Christmas tree, and Marjorie's with a star and crescent.

"That is so each child can find his own things without running to someone else to ask about them," Mrs. Feldmann explained.

"The same method is carried out in nearly everything we do. The children are given a free reign in almost everything, and they soon learn not only how to care for themselves, but sometimes even prefer not to let others help them."

Silenced

He (angrily)—Do you believe everything every fool tells you?

She (sweetly)—Oh, no, darling, but sometimes you do sound so plausible.

Not A Nice Assistant

Mistress—I must get a griller for the kitchen when I'm down town. You know what a griller is?

Green Girl (with recollections of the Zoo)—Indeed I do. It's a long hairy, monkey the size of a man, and if you want one of those in your kitchen I'm leaving at once.

So Easy To Silence

She—Isn't the radio wonderful?

He—Wonderful! Just think of the jazz orchestras, screaming sopranos, arid addresses and alleged comedies you can silence with one little turn of the dial.

"My wife says if I don't chuck golf she'll leave me."

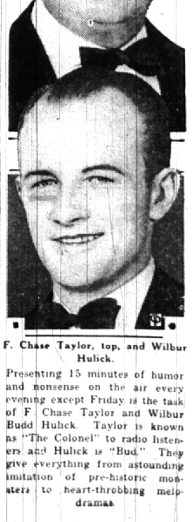
"Hard luck, old chap."

"Yes—I'll miss her."

He—"Your eyes twinkle like diamonds."

She—"Go on, tell me more about diamonds."

STARS OF RADIOLAND



F. Chase Taylor, top, and Wilbur Hulick.

Presenting 15 minutes of humor and nonsense on the air every evening except Friday is the task of F. Chase Taylor and Wilbur Budd Hulick. Taylor is known as "The Colonel" to radio listeners and Hulick is "Bud." They give everything from astounding imitation of pre-historic monsters to heart-throbbing melodramas
