

I don't know of anything worse than a wife that can cook, but won't. What about the wife who can't cook but will?

Life's Little Laughs

To Gratify Her Wish Motorist's Wife: What lovely fleecy clouds. I'd just love to be up there sitting on one of them. Motorist: All right. You drive the car.—Tid-Bits.

Changed the Subject A bashful youth had been presented to a flapper and for ten minutes he sat speechless, growling, redder and redder and more embarrassed. At length the girl said sweetly: "And now let us talk of something else.—Hummel, Hamburg.

His Wife's Motto "I say, Wedmore, what's that saying about the hat fitting?" "Do you want the masculine or the feminine reading?" "The feminine, I don't understand." "Oh, the hat fits, feminine version."—Boston Transcript.

Appropriate A talking picture containing only women characters is to be filmed in Hollywood. Some say that it will be anything but more appropriate than that.—Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

Characteristic Americanism: Furnishing Russia talent to modernize herself; living in dread of the competition; taste made possible.—New Britain Herald.

Off For Cash As we understand the figures quoted by Hoover in his latest message to Congress, the country is today enjoying the old 1928 prosperity with 15 or 20 per cent off for cash.—Virginia-Pilot.

Shocking Duplicitly English: Evident complaining about chambermaid.—Properly two-faced the missus is. She never says the same to her face as what you hear through the key-hole.—Passing Show.

Maximilian Protest "I shall not use tobacco," said little Robert Reed. "It seems since you smoke cigarettes Effeminate indeed."—Washington Star.

True to Form Best Man (speaking bridegroom after the ceremony)—Where's Angus? "Guest—He's at the back of the chair, trying on the old shoes.—Tid-Bits.

One Sure Way The New York man who took poison, cut his throat and wrists, and jumped out of a window in an unsuccessful attempt at suicide, might try peddling hooch in Chicago without adding Mr. Capone.—Macon Telegraph.

Inspiring There is much in this country to inspire young men, and you do not doubt when Al Capone started out in business he didn't have a machine gun to his name.—Ohio State Journal.

His Wife Saved Him "She—What do you mean by telling Margie Smith that I was a walking drug store?" "He—(with sudden happy thought)—I—or—I mean, of course, that you're everything.—Canadian Magazine.
