ever," and "that the work be completed," on or before Oct. 1 of this year. The speaker expressed his behavior of the county by the three road commissioners at the request of grand jury. Defective construction of roads was blamed in part "to faulty supervision and engineering on the part of the Road Commission."

The R. D. Baker Construction Company was cleared of all implications of a criminal nature in connection with the paving, and no indictments were made by the jury from an investigation of road matters. (Concluded 1 from Page 1)

As an instance of the latter case he mentioned Lawrence, the builder of the motor which carried Lindbergh to Paris. "I am not so sure," he said, "but that in the ultimate story of aviation the name of Lawrence will last as long as that of Lindbergh, for he has produced something of a good nature to ride in an airplane than it is to make one."

The speaker referred to James W. Gerard's list of 59 great Americans and lamented the fact that none of them are political figures. "Nothing is so necessary in this day and age as patriotism and pride in our country, and unless we can produce that patriotism this nation will come tumbling down at the foundations," he declared.

Pointing out that Washington refused to take pay for serving his country, Reverend Rice stated that the first president epitomizes this kind of patriotism and claimed that present conditions demand an imitation of Washington's example and a fulfillment of the "obligation to bring your patriotism not to your profit but to the advancement of your nation."

Composes Two Presidents Abraham Lincoln was described as an "unexplainable character," and "the one president who could call into his cabinet a man he could not tolerate in private life." "If Wilson could have done that same thing," the speaker continued, "he would have been sitting now on a pedestal we never dreamed of. His fault was he did not like."

Washington and Lincoln represent the two extremes of what is best in American life and what is needed for leadership in the present world of affairs, the speaker declared. Hart Speaks "Washington was the father of his country, Lincoln the son," he said. "Washington was the aristocrat, Lincoln the commoner."

"In this country the loins of king and no-man are on a par together. The country is your hands. May God grant that you not fail in this sacred trust." The class was presented for graduation by Melvin C. Hart, Baldwin High School principal, who also commented on temporary conditions.

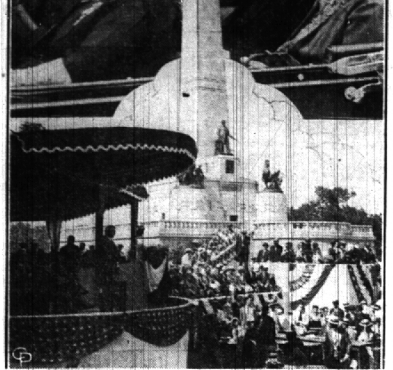

"The faith of institutions has been questioned as well as the faith of individuals," he said. "The past few days in Birmingham have caused us to do a lot of serious thinking." Describes Aims "There may be shifting of values," he continued, and referred to the home, the church and the school as permanent institutions which stand the strain of changing conditions in the business and social world.

"I would not dare venture a definition of education," he said, "but I believe I represent the thought of the teachers of this school when I say that we have attempted to instill into these 73 graduates a rather fundamental store of knowledge, but more important than that, have attempted to develop ideas of leadership, unselfishness and service." He admonished the graduates to bear in mind the debt they owe their state and parents for their education and concluded his presentation with the hope "that you will display the same attitude outside the classroom as you have displayed as students."

What Great Diplomas The diplomas were awarded by Superintendent Clarence Vliet. "We know you will give creditable service in the community in which you live," he told the graduates. "We are glad to welcome you as full-fledged alumni." The valedictory address was delivered by Mary Emma Green and the salutatory by Nancy Johnson. R. A. Palmer, secretary of the School Board, presided over the ceremony in the absence of the president, Leigh Lynch. A check for $50 was presented to the Student Loan Fund Association on behalf of the graduating class by Curtis Matthews, class president. The gift was accepted by Earl G. Potter, School Board trustee. Father Commends Gift "I'm glad you're not leaving something to hang on the walls of municipal debts is a necessity, believes Mr. Chatters, thus prolonging the period of economic hard times. "Future development must be slow," he said. "People must not demand of their public officials more than is within their collective power to pay for. The public too often favors economy in government—but wants the economy to start with the other fellow. We shall get through our present problems, so let us be optimistic in the kind of optimism that is backed by intelligent planning."

"The administration is founded on the most approved business method. Officials and subordinates are above any possible criticism in the discharge of their duties. Indeed we are fortunate in that we have no waste, no graft, no padded payrolls, no maladministration, no extravagance." "Any village, however, is financially dependent on the prompt collection of taxes. Our village credit has always been good and punctual payment of taxes as a general rule in the past has aided in securing for us the lowest interest rate on our bonds."

"Therefore the policy of early payments should be continued, and the future not only as a means of insuring efficient government in the times ahead, but also as a sensible business procedure which will result in a material saving to the individual taxpayer." Laud Government on Tax "The administration is founded on the most approved business method. Officials and subordinates are above any possible criticism in the discharge of their duties. Indeed we are fortunate in that we have no waste, no graft, no padded payrolls, no maladministration, no extravagance."

Leading sculptors of the United States will have more than four months to submit designs for the new quarter dollar to be issued next year by the treasury department. The announcement was made on the 20th anniversary of the birth of George Washington.

Robert J. Gray, director of the Mint, acting under the direction of Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, has just sent a letter to prominent sculptors inviting submission of models for the obverse side and reverse side of the new coin. These models will be received at the office of the director of the mint, in the treasury department, up to and including Oct. 15. It is felt that this will allow ample time for the artists to perfect their designs and afford the treasury time to prepare dies for the production of the new quarter dollar beginning February 22, 1932.

It is expected that the selection of the design for the new quarter will be made from the models submitted, but the treasury reserves the right to reject all models offered. The secretary of the treasury will select the design. Before the final decision is reached he will invite the commission of fine arts and the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission to pass on the merits of the designs. Fifteen hundred dollars will be paid to the artist whose design is chosen by Secretary Mellon. Nothing will be paid for rejected models.

Pete Metropolitan, of Pontiac, world's wrestling champion will meet Olof Blomberg, Swedish champ, in the main event of a boxing and wrestling program at the Clawson A. C. Friday, July 3. Two other wrestling matches and one boxing bout will complete the card.

Lone Pine Paving Project Is Delayed

A technical error in procedure has delayed the paving of Lone Pine road from Cranbrook to Orchard Ridge roads as approved by the Bloomfield Hills Village Commission. It has been announced by Harry S. Starr, village engineer. Failure to advertise for two weeks in advance the public hearing for property owners on the paving which was held June 6 will necessitate a second hearing at the Commission meeting July 7. Mr. Starr said. Bids, however, will not have to be received a second time. As opened June 16, the low bid for the paving work was submitted by the Taylor Construction Company of Birmingham which agreed to do the job for $16,250, while the Penkell Construction Company of Detroit was the low bidder on the

J. B. Howarth, insurance agent: "The uncertainty of the law is demonstrated by the fact that the United States Supreme Court, the chief justice having the last guess on the constitutionality of laws passed by congress and state legislatures, a court composed of nine of the supposedly brightest legal minds of our country, divided five to four on three important cases within the past month—the chain-store tax law of Indiana, the press-pap law of Minnesota and our national law defining the qualifications of aliens applying for citizenship." Sewer installation, placing the cost at $189,400. Contracts will probably be allowed after the hearing on July 7. First estimates had put the cost of the paving at $40,000.

Burglars Ransack Home, Take Revolver

Police are continuing their search today for the thief or thieves who Sunday night broke into the residence of Montgomery Whiting at 3077 Abbey road and after ransacking the house from top to bottom escaped with a Colt revolver. Evidence was gained by forcing open a side window while occupants of the house were away. The burglary was reported by the maid who returned shortly after midnight and discovered that furniture had been upset and drawers and tables ransacked through in a fruitless search for money. The revolver was taken from beneath a pillow on a bed in an upstairs room. Fingerprints were the only clues left by the prowler, according to Detective Joseph J. MacGregor.
