New School Board Member Says Churches Overlook Child's Needs

"Churches were built for adults, not for children," Earl G. Potter, newly appointed member of the Birmingham Board of Education, said today in a speech before the Normal Child Spiritually, before members of the Parent Teacher Association of the Barnum School Thursday afternoon.

The address was the concluding number of a series on the normal child considered physically, mentally, psychologically and spiritually, arranged by the program chairman, Mrs. E. W. Osborne.

"I am speaking of the church of the past," Mr. Potter explained, "when churches were built for their stiff-backed uncomfittable people and when no thought was given to the children in the congregation. Their comfort was not considered.

"The old-time preacher was not interested in children. He was too busy trying to save the parents' souls. Withholding that he was talking over the heads of the children and young people who are making any attempt to reach them.

"But the church is changing. And today we are glad to see that churchmen are becoming more interested in children than in adults. Even now what the church influences your child?

"What does your child get out of Sunday School? That depends on the teacher, and we have many Sunday School teachers who come unprepared to instruct their classes. Many of them do not even know what the lesson is until they stand before the class on Sunday."

Home Duty

Spiritual education should begin in the home, Mr. Potter told the audience.

"We can't look to the state to benefit the spiritual growth of the child," Mr. Potter declared, "and how much do you think the public school system can do for the spiritual development of your child?"

"The public school in this country has been of value, but it has gotten a long way off from it. I think the schools will get back to religion in the future. There are classes in religion. The trouble is, the Presbyterians might not be so much as the Methodists and the educators are afraid religious instruction in the public schools would mean a scrap."

Parents Must Believe

"The home is the only place for spiritual education. It must begin early, and it must be day-to-day matter so the children will be interested and talk about it. Parents should not think of it in the terms of church or religion, but as a common sense matter.

"They must first sell themselves on the idea that they have some spiritual convictions before they try to teach. It is easy to teach the child the things of the spirit if parents are firm in their own beliefs."

DETROIT CIVIC THEATER

"Ladies of the Jury," Fred Ballard's banner comedy, will be given a request repetition production at the Detroit Civic Theater next week, opening Monday night, June 1, and closing Sunday night, June 7. Miss Bonstelle will again appear in the title role of Mrs. Livingston Baldwin Crane, the only made actress by Mrs. Fiske in the original company and by Miss Bonstelle during the Civic Theater production last January.

It is the dubious story of a social leader who enters a jury room, the only member to believe the defendant innocent. During the unhappy two days in which the jury is locked up, Mrs. Crane convinces each of her fellow jurors that her judgment is the correct one. How she does this is the subject of the play.
