"Crusaders" Learn Hymns As Parents Attend Church

Mrs. Claude A. Bowlin of York road has found a solution to a problem which has long puzzled parents—how can children be pleasantly and profitably occupied while their parents are listening to the Sunday sermon?

Under the leadership of Mrs. Bowlin, a group has been organized in the First Baptist Church to meet every Sunday during the church hour. With the challenging name of the "Crusaders" the group, composed of boys and girls from nine to 12 years of age, has entered upon a novel contest.

Each team, of which there are two, has set out to learn four stanzas of a hymn and a number of verses from Scripture. At the end of the time limit specified, both teams will recite, and the one that has memorized most accurately will be rewarded by the losing team with a prize and a party.

Another activity of the "Crusaders" is to study the children of other lands that they may have a more genuine feeling of international brotherhood. In connection with this project, the children will read this year "Open Windows," by Mary Entwistle.

Assisting Mrs. Bowlin in conducting the work of the group is Mrs. J. S. Wallace of Bates street. A class of a similar nature for children under nine years of age is conducted at the same hour by Mrs. Edwin Minks of Lincoln avenue.

If you are camera-shy because your pictures never "do justice," have the solution. Have your complex photographed.

"Complex" photographs—made by a recent discovery in Chicago—Machines have been perfected at the University of Chicago, which with the aid of a motion picture camera, photograph your complex.

"secret" which by a painless process.

Once upon a time there was a lady who went to have her complex photographed.

"Good morning," she said to the photographer. "I want to have my complex photographed."

"How do you do it?" queried the worried photographer. He didn't like complexes. They are so—oh—complete. One never knows what they will do before a camera.

"I don't know," replied the lady, "but I think I've had it all my life."

"Ever had its picture taken before?" questioned the photographer as he poured a little gasoline in the camera.

"No," replied the lady as she began to hunt for her complex.

"Do you think it will cry?" nursed the photographer relentlessly.

"No, it isn't that kind of complex," "I can't find my complex."

"Well, what's the matter?"

"I can't find my complex."

"Maybe it slipped out the door," suggested the photographer looking over the hall. "What was it like?"

"Oh dear, I can't remember."

"Are you sure you had one?" the photographer asked suspiciously. "Well, I was sure I had it when I came in. That's why I came. It must have lost it on the way."

For the past 25 years, Mrs. W. E. Boswell of Fort Worth, Tex., has been rising at 4 A. M. to get her daily routine of poems and epigrams written, before preparing breakfast for her husband and 11 children.

And she does it because it seems to be her favorite indoor sport.

She has never published her literary efforts, but for her family and close friends, her lines are "born to blush unseen."

Her own epigram expresses her opinion of those who wake their time, and apparently explains her early hour for rising:

"Idlers are as useless as sundials on dark days."

In another epigram she writes: "Women nor watermelons ne'er We know by their shape nor shade of their outside show."

Now, if she could think of a good one about choosing husbands and cantaloupes, we might put it to practical use.

Yes, Chicago would!

At 10 o'clock a day he set aside for gum chewing was recently suggested by a Chicago scientist.

"Four o'clock gum" instead of five o'clock tea, is his idea of speeding up office efficiency.

His theory being that "office noises reduce speed of employees as fatigue increases toward the end of the day."

"Gum chewing," he explained, "would balance fatigue because it stimulates secretion of gastric juices and provides sugar, and important dietary contribution toward efficiency."

Why didn't somebody ask him how often he had tried it out in his own office?

Also, why not go further, doctor, and suggest to employers that they build stalls to which the gum-chewers might retreat at the chewing-hour each day, just out of consideration for the sensibilities of the non-chewing members of the office force?

It is now perfectly good form for a wife to suggest to her husband to go to the dentist.
