

TRIO ASKS TRIAL FOLLOWING CRASH

County Residents, Charged As Disorderly, Place Fate With Jury

Three men, residents of Southern Oakland County, are at liberty under bond today awaiting a jury trial in Justice Floyd S. Buck's court on April 20 on charges of being drunk and disorderly following an accident in which they were involved on Woodward avenue near Lone Pine road Friday night.

Nellis Barnes, 335 Orchard Lake road, Pontiac, according to Bloomfield Hills police.

No one was injured, but all three men were arrested when officers claimed they had been drinking.

All three pleaded not guilty and asked for a jury trial following their release from County Jail after raising $100 cash bond each.

Single Tax Expert To Address Rotary Club Here Monday

By LILLIAN CARTER

For more than 40 years, while the village people have gone on living, loving and dying, sometimes stirred by wars, changed in time by booms of enterprise and industry, caught perhaps a moment in a time of mutual losses and failures, a worn old easy chair had stood the First Methodist Church on West Maple avenue.

Peering back many years into church history, Joseph R. Dalley, superintendent of the Sunday School, recently found that the chair, now broken and warped and old, had been presented 40 years ago to a certain Mattie Brooks, wife of Eugene Brooks, who was a primary department superintendent at that time.

Therefore, Monday evening when 23 officers and teachers gathered at the church for the regular board meeting, Mr. Dalley had a surprise for them all. The chair, refinished and renewed, stood firm and whole again—and was presented by Mr. Dalley with words of appreciation to Miss Ella Adams who has served single tax made famous by Henry George, eminent American economist and philosopher.

His address here, beginning at 12:45 P. M., will be open to the public.

Mr. Dalley was born in Joplin, Mo., in 1880, and entered public life at the age of 23 when he was elected tax collector of Webb City. Since the World War, his speaking talents have taken him from the field of active business and practical politics to the lecture platform, where he has become an exponent of the doctrine of the three fish and former manager of the Baldwin High School swimming team. "It was even colder this time than it was last year when I went in on the 21st of March. It must have been the wind."

The second member of the trio was Dan Robertson.

"Don't tell 'em who the third one was," Jimmy pleaded. "He doesn't want his mother to know."

Thieves, it seems, are growing bolder and busier these days. The one who broke into the shop in the rear of C. A. Sutherland's home at 754 Southfield road Sunday night must have been especially husky, for his loot included a wood ladle, wood chisels, and an anvil! But then, too, he may be just a grand opera enthusiast with a penchant for choruses.

Admits Obscene Language Charge

R. W. Browner, employe of a pastry shop on West Maple avenue, paid court costs amounting to $12.50 after pleading guilty to a charge of using obscene language conferred by Gus Hoyman of the Waldron Hotel, Pontiac.

Heyan, a Neon sign salesman, claimed he entered the pastry shop Thursday when he noticed a Neon sign in the window which he said was not being operated properly.

When he suggested to Browner that it should be fixed, Browner ordered him to leave the store and followed him out onto the street, calling him abusive names and using obscene language in the presence of several persons, Hoyman charged.

DRUNK DRIVER FINED

Eas D. Ingle, St. Clair, Mich., pleaded guilty to a charge of drunk driving and paid a $75 fine to Justice Floyd S. Buck last Thursday morning. He had been arrested by Birmingham police the night before.

Miss Betty Neal of Oakland avenue will be the guest this weekend of Miss Marjoris Windham of Port Huron.

as superintendent of the primary department 21 years.

The other four teachers who have taught for two full decades were presented each with a handsome volume entitled "The Words of Jesus," in recognition," said Mr. Dalley, "of faithful, efficient and continued service."

The four were Miss Margaret Carroll, Miss Grace Hancock, Mrs. Loretta Hutcock and Mrs. H. C. Murray. Each of the women celebrated with a few words in acceptance. Most of them were pupils of Mattie Brooks long ago.

"So often," said Mr. Dalley, "appreciation for loyalty like this is left unexpressed and is neglected until it is too late. We wanted them to know now."

Old-Time Church Hymns Will Ring

Favorites And Classics Will Mark Community Sing Sunday Evening

Old-time and favorite hymns will resound joyously from the walls of the Birmingham Presbyterian Church Sunday night in the first of what is hoped will be a series of old-fashioned community hymn-sings.

The sing, to which the entire evening worship service will be devoted, will be divided into two sections and will be open to the public.

The first part will include the singing of the old classics of hymnody in chronological order, with the history and background of each related briefly by various members of the congregation, including E. W. Seaholm, Charles S. Kimmon and Robert Hilly.

The second part of the service will be devoted to the singing of favorite hymns selected by a recent vote of the congregation, the Young Peoples' Group and the choir will take special parts in the program. Mr. Seaholm will preside.

"One of America's Great Weekly Newspapers"

TWO THOUSAND, eight hundred and eight weeks ago the initial issue of the Newspaper you are now reading came into being. Small in size, limited in pages, elemental in appearance—with all the characteristics of the day . . . it was taken from a slow, hand-operated press to circulate among the few hundred people who comprised the Birmingham of 1878. For its day, it was a fine paper.

Today, from that few hundred circulation, it has gained more than 10,000 readers . . . from a few lines of advertising it has grown to be one of the largest weekly newspapers in America—all this without a single inducement other than its own merit. Down the avenue of years it has enjoyed a steady growth, like the substantial growth of those things which rely upon their quality alone.

Years ago certain standards and ideals of newspaper making were set up by this newspaper. Character. Accuracy. Wholesomeness. And because it still adheres closely to these simple elements of news-gathering and news-presentation it is turned to with confidence by those in mansion and cottage alike. It is depended upon for news of that life which is closer, perhaps, to its readers than any other—that life which surrounds their HOMES.

The volumes of The Eccentric on file since its founding are irrefutable evidence of how intimately this newspaper has lived with its readers. The joys, the achievements, the associations, the sorrows—the very pulsation of the life of the community is recorded, week by week, for all the people . . . and everyone can afford it.

Likewise the commercial life has been served. A newspaper that lives so intimately with its readers, and has their confidence, offers much to the advertiser. Recognizing this function of its business, this newspaper has strived to offer more than mechanical facilities to the commercial expression of the village's business and professional life. As an acknowledgment of such efforts and abilities there has come to The Birmingham Eccentric the distinction of rendering, during 1930, the finest service throughout the weekly press of the nation in assisting the advertisers who use its columns.
