League To Discuss Village-City Change

Members of the Birmingham League of Women Voters will combine for a dinner and program Wednesday when they will gather at the Community House for luncheon and a discussion of the proposed change from village to the city form of government for Birmingham.

Clara E. V. Smith of the Michigan Municipal League staff, who is in Birmingham on a special assignment to study the progress of the city government in Oakland County, will be the principal speaker. Mr. Smith's subject will be "The Merits of City Government."

Both sides of the question will be discussed by local speakers. Sample resolutions will be displayed to illustrate the various issues to be discussed at the Sept. 13 primary.

From A WOMAN'S ANGLE

There's one, it seems, in every dozen, that's old enough to vote, and a daughter who mostly likes, and a neighbor who comes as a 'Good Will' ambassador to strap you in to strap your resentful prospect. You know the type. Oh, yes, you do. You are a crafty mother, you are a mother who wouldn't have scaped all day if she could have found a more perfect one. You don't have the heart to marry for the children who you've found there before you.

"You're not going to bubble in the lake? Oh, my! I should see you at some other place. Didn't you see in the paper that three children were drowned there last summer?"

"Of course, I know you'll watch your 'them'. You are a crafty mother, you are a mother who wouldn't have scaped all day if she could have found a more perfect one. You don't have the heart to marry for the children who you've found there before you."

"And another thing I ought to tell you is that the police is simply over-run with poison fish. You'll see that the Jones is a scoundrel to it, isn't it? Remember the way she looked when your husband carried her in last summer after you had the riot until his tax against you of her soiling up her things."

You may be laughing this, but you'll discover a slight rash, or 'stomach' or 'head' or 'toes' you know, 'Oh, I wouldn't be sure, 'warn you, 'warn you, 'warn you, 'warn you, 'warn you. Mrs. Whose's will never forgive herself for letting go the first time she saw a rash on her little boy. Poor little Willy. Whoops! It was scarlet fever. Yes, 'ye-ah, 'ye-ah, 'ye-ah. They don't think she learns you are

Wife Learns to Be a Mother

"My dear, I think you ought to know, I don't want to quarrel with you, but you know the boys saw a terrible accident last night at the main road. They were coming back from their hiking trip, and got there just after midnight."

"They said it might have been terrible, but I don't want to fight with you."

"I merely thought if you knew in fact, you could tell on the phone, but who was hurt, or killed, just to reassure yourself."

"Of course it wasn't your husband, but I don't think it would be any your business. He's such a good man! Mrs. Rice here, a better friend."

"No, I'm sure, his wife said that I knew you'd hear about the accident from someone else, you know, you would be such a shock to you, so I thought I'd tell you about it myself."

"And on and on. On first acquaintance, she probably succeeds in reaching you in a few days, but her letters on temporary insanity."

Then your nervous system develops a short circuit, and you become slightly hard-shelled about her "warnings." You have to be, in your position.
