WE HEARD IT SAID BY — Mrs. E. R. Ross, 504 Willits street, Ilion, noticed in The Eccentric column of "Fifty Years Ago," recently, comment was made upon the large crop of weeds growing in certain parts of the state. That long ago it was a matter of concern and I wondered if those weeds could compare with the abundance of unsightly weed growth at present. On a recent trip to the state of Batavia, N.Y., in the 17 years I have lived in Birmingham, I have never seen the town's vacant lots so neglected and overrun with weeds. They are not only ugly, however, but, like dust and vermin, they are a menace to health. Persons afflicted with hay fever and other forms of sneezing fits are often the victims of these weeds. Furthermore, nests are drawn down from them into neighboring gardens, making it necessary to tear nests, thistles, and the like, out of the ground. This is a waste of money and time. I feel that it is a matter deserving consideration of the ordinance that was created for this very purpose.
