Luther's Last Experiment

Luther Burbank, wizard of horticulture, was often derided by strangers, who desired to know why he didn't develop this or that—as for example, a grapefruit without partitions in it.

"Well, Mr. Burbank, what miracle are you working on now?" one inquisitive individual asked.

"Well, it's a secret," answered the expert, "but I don't mind telling you. I'm grafting milkweed on a plant."

"That's interesting! And what do you expect to produce?"

"Custard," was the reply.
