

TS and THAT

By G. R. A.

Who attended the recent session of the First Baptist Church when the "Yippies" Normal Choir of 180 mixed voices lifted their consciousness into realms of harmony may be remembered as having just before Frederick Alexander, director of the choir, completed his musical feat. For the choir, organized as an unorganized in the whole nation, is what is known as Mr. Alexander's musical ability, plus his great cooperation of the harmonies of the mixed voices. (Mr. Alexander is a member of the department of music at the Michigan State Normal College, Ypsilanti, for more than a score of years.) But to acquaint you with the Alexander's thinking along musical lines, I will refer to me the other day he said:

"Your Birmingham citizens remind me and my choir so much of my singing. The choir is a group of mixed voices, some of them are of the same age as you. You must have accomplished what I have done here, and I find it reaches other souls' souls. Singing would be so important to me, that I would like to have a choir of mixed voices, all our social functions—our church, our school, our community, our city, our state, our nation, our world. I have a calendar in RED with a list of names of Dr. W. W. Kemp, local leader of music, and the committee that organized the choir from Ypsilanti."

It is the quality of that audience which as we began to sing, the results, to my mind, were extraordinary. Many of you must have accomplished what I have done here, and I find it reaches other souls' souls. Singing would be so important to me, that I would like to have a choir of mixed voices, all our social functions—our church, our school, our community, our city, our state, our nation, our world. I have a calendar in RED with a list of names of Dr. W. W. Kemp, local leader of music, and the committee that organized the choir from Ypsilanti."

Eventful Changes Told In Headlines of 1932

Probably never before in Birmingham's history has a single year been so fruitful of changes and readjustments in almost every branch of activity as that of 1932—changes the true significance of which will probably not be realized until matters come to come.

It was a year in which the village, along with the Village of Bloomfield Hills decided to abandon its old governmental roles and don those of a city. It was a year in which the municipal government, along with schools and other units in general, suffered further major decreases in revenue, making curtailments and reductions the paramount need in the continuation of the year.

New In Government

Governmental affairs were at all times of importance in the year, with elections—local, state and national. The Reed report on Oakland County affairs, the new Birmingham of property valuations in Bloomfield Township holding the reins.

Changes in official and semi-official personnel were numerous. The dismissal of Clarence Viles, for 17 years superintendent of the Birmingham schools, and his replacement by Charles W. Crandall stirred one of the most active and wide-spread controversies in the village's history, prolonged for weeks until formation in the new year constituted a new chapter in the history of Birmingham.
