

WONDERQUITS CONGRESS RACE

Royal Oak Attorney Blames Prohibition Battle For Withdrawal

Formal announcement of his withdrawal as a candidate for Congress to represent the new 17th district was made by George A. Dondero, Royal Oak attorney, Tuesday evening in an address before an audience of 200 in the Presbyterian Church in Pontiac.

The reason for withdrawal given by Mr. Dondero to his audience, admitted supporters of the Eighteenth Amendment, was that he considered himself "satisfied" between the conflicting policies of wet and dry factions.

"I am withdrawing from this campaign," Mr. Dondero explained, "because I am neither dry enough for the drys nor wet enough for the wets."

"When I say I am an ex-barrister, I mean it," he continued. "And I do it with no degree of embarrassment. When I was behind the bars, I learned much about the saloons days, and with this knowledge I fail to see how the return of legal liquor would help the country today."

"I am not a prohibitionist and I do not believe in the prohibition of the present day," Mr. Dondero told his audience.

"As a lawyer, as a voter, must

An office for dealing in real estate, general insurance and suburban homes has been opened in 317 Wabash Building by Rice A. Howell, a resident of Birmingham since 1919.

Before coming here, Mr. Howell resided in Detroit where, from 1914 to 1919, he conducted his own real estate and insurance business. Mr. Howell last week was elected to membership in the Birmingham Exchange Club.

One of the employment problems, I do not believe that special of the Eighteenth Amendment will provide the unemployment situation any more than the liquor industry has been a remedy for the unemployed in Europe, such as England, Germany, Belgium and France.

"I hope the Eighteenth Amendment will not be repealed, and I do not believe even the wet are in favor of a return to the old saloon days. But the question should be put to the vote of the people. If repeal is their will, then the matter should be handled by the Federal Government and not by the states."

PLA BORDER BARS UGLINESS

Screens Yards From Unsightly Views If Properly Placed

Setting out border plantings along the boundaries of our lot is a most fascinating step as we go about making our home greater into a place of beauty and of family enjoyment.

Design of the border allows greater scope for our individual fancy than does the foundation planting as it is associated more closely with the private rather than the public portion of our yard. Here, however, greater care is adopted for the beautification of our place as a whole, formal or informal, is a necessary filter through which to pass every personal desire before we allow it to take form in a row of trees, shrubs, vines covered trellises, a strip of herbaceous plants or a shrubby border.

Design of the border boundary planting, for on the average city lot they will be the same, will serve in certain definite ways if we do it correctly.

It will provide our family with privacy essential to enjoyable use of the home grounds. Even among friendly neighbors we welcome a shield to protect us against too curious eyes.

Screen Out Unsightliness

The right sort of boundary of garden planting will also screen out unsightly views and objects. Telephone poles and their mass of wires, for instance, can be hidden by correctly placed trees. High growing shrubs will mask a ramshackle garage or a vine-covered trellis which looks out a broken-down fence or rubbish heap. Sometimes entire districts such as railroads, dilapidated factories, squalid tenements or residences present themselves to view whenever we step out of doors. Again, trees, high growing shrubs and hedges and climbing vines with their thick foliage will eliminate the unsightly picture.

On the other hand, if a park, a lake, a snowy mountain peak, a city's beautiful garden or some work of art such as a public monument should lie in view from our grounds we will not wish to hide them from our sight but we do design our plantings as to enhance their beauty, by hanging beautiful pictures on the walls of green that bound our outdoor living room.

As a background for flowers the shrubby border is almost indispensable. The bright hues of bud bloom show to best advantage against the dark green of shrub and tree foliage.

Give Shade Protection

Protection from too burning sun, strong winds, dust storms and wintry blizzards also come to us from adequate plantings along the lot borders, making our family life more enjoyable in winter as well as outside the house.

And then the boundary plantings enlarge and dignify our premises, framing our entire home picture, giving it an individual character and developing it into

Just a Couple of Stowaways

Lure Of The Sea Attracts Eight-Year-Old And Younger Brother To Lifboat On South-American Steamer

Immanuel and Jose Martinez

(Our little heroes, Immanuel and Jose Martinez, aged eight and five, respectively, are the youngest brother and sister of the South American steamer E. Rey del Mar which left the harbor here a few days ago bound for Rio de Janeiro.)

"The King of the Sea" was a day and a half out of port before little Jose's cries attracted one of the world's youngest stowaways were discovered.

In a large lifeboat, the sailor found Immanuel sleeping peacefully against a boat window, while Jose great tears rolling down his face.

Immanuel and Jose were found in the lifeboat at the opposite end of the dingy.

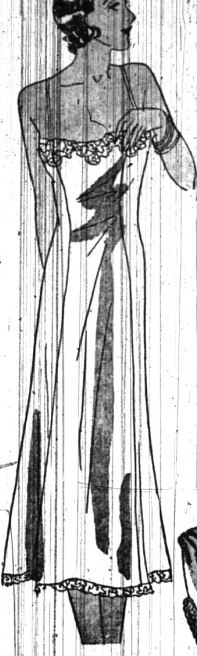

Aboard at his find, the sailor reported to the captain, who, after questioning his youthful stowaways, radioed Buenos Aires police who replied that the two little fellows had been missing from their home for several days.

Immanuel and Jose were fed and cared for and now face a long sea voyage for the "King of the Sea" cannot turn back to Buenos Aires. They will be brought to their home city when the ship completes its regular coastal run.

Neither was injured nor, although they had spent a day and a half in the cramped space within the lifeboat, were they ill.

Now both boys are happy, radio reports state.

Sgt. Green Gives A Fellow A Lift

But Officer's Generosity Lands "Hitch-Hiker" In Jail Instead Of California

Sergeant William Green always likes to give a fellow a lift. But until one day last week did he realize how directly generosity is sometimes wont to repay its possessor.

Driving from Pontiac to Birmingham, the sergeant, with his usual graciousness and lawless spirit, stopped to pick up a young "hitch-hiker"; then, with the usual humor and tact of any good policeman, he cast a carefully trained eye on his new passenger and began to ask a few questions.

Green's features and accent, he guessed, were unmistakable. And since policemen are, by profession, of a suspicious nature, it was natural for the sergeant to remember a warrant that had been issued here for a young Greek—one Charles Ganosko by name—for breaking and entering the shoe repair parlor of Gus Bahimus, East Ninth avenue, on May 15 and stealing a pair of oxfords, $4 worth of cigars and cigarettes, and $6 in cash.

Plays A Hunch

The sergeant had never seen Ganosko, but he remembered the burglary and warrant, and played a hunch.

"Looking for a job?" he asked.

"Yes, the stranger replied.

"Don't seem to be much around here, though."

"What do you do?"

"Oh, anything. Mostly shoe shining."

"That so? Ever work in Birmingham?"

"Yes, I worked for Gus Bahimus last summer."

"Oh? What's your name?"

And the young stranger, still unperturbed by the sergeant's uniform and badge, replied unhesitatingly: "Charles Ganosko."

Plans Are Changed

The sergeant blinked a trifle, but he smiled and got out of work.

"Where you heading for now?" he asked.

"Believe I'll hit for California," was the reply.

But by this time the sergeant had other ideas. He carved up and stopped before Gus Bahimus' place of business. The proprietor identified the suspect and pointed to the man that had taken the shoes. They were the same pair that had been stolen from the shop on May 15, only a few days after Bahimus had taken pity on the wester by giving him food and lodging when he applied to his former employer for aid, penniless and out of work.

A few minutes later Ganosko, who is 20 years old, had formally confessed to the burglary at police headquarters. Tuesday he was sentenced in Circuit Court to 30 days in jail for 30 years for breaking and entering.

Crash Brings Fine For Drunk Driving

L. C. Moore, 48 years old, of 208 Linn street, was fined $50 for drunk driving by Justice Floyd S. Buck Tuesday afternoon.

Moore's car was involved at the corner of Lincoln and Woodward streets Sunday afternoon, when it ran into a car driven by Raymond Oles, Detroit. Oles, a passenger riding with Oles, was seriously injured.

In addition to the fine, Moore was made to pay $25 toward the cost of Oles' car and Eads' doctor's bill.

The New York Zoological Park was founded in 1895. The New York Zoological Society, a scientific organization, the park was formally founded in 1899.

Specialty look issue with the report, and maintained that government services in the village should not be curtailed to the detriment of established standards and the possible decrease in real estate value.

Mr. Glancy, in arguing that traffic congestion were necessary to save the village from falling deeper into debt, was supported by Charles Booth, Lone Pine road; E. C. Hammond; W. G. Lechen, West Lone Lake road; E. S. Nichols, East Lone Lake road; and others, all large property owners who had been invited by letter from the Commission to attend the meeting.

The committee finally appointed to work out a program of action in cooperation with the Commission, was composed of Mr. Glancy, Mr. Nichols and A. C. Horn of Troubridge Farms. Mr. Barn, informed that the police add fire departments should be larger than smaller, was the only person at the meeting who fully supported the Commission's view.

Will Meet Monday

The committee will hold its first meeting with the Commission Monday night. Whatever program is adopted is expected to be completed before the election on the new city charter, and will be recommended for use by the new city administration or the continuing village administration, whatever the case may be.

It was disclosed during the course of the discussion that a committee of the Commission, appointed at its last meeting to study the salary problem among village employes, intended to recommend reductions averaging 20 percent throughout the entire personnel.

It was also revealed, through

Mr. Nichols, a member of the charter commission, that assistance in drafting the charter is being received by Senator Claude Stevens, Detroit attorney.

A group of representatives of the Michigan Municipal League which had been engaged at first to give this assistance "talked back out of a job," Mr. Nichols said, in arguing too stringently for the city manager type of government. Mr. Nichols indicated the charter would not be fully completed for several weeks.

Chief Residential Location

James had a visitor over the week-end, and on Sunday the two went motoring. As they passed a burial place the visitor remarked, "That's a fine old cemetery."

"Yes," said Jones, who is a real estate agent, "and only five minutes to the station."
