Admission Cut For 1932 Michigan Fair

DETROIT—The 1932 Michigan State Fair and Exposition, Sept. 4 to 10, is to have a 25-cent ticket.
Cutting the general admission price in half was approved this week by the fair's executive committee. The reduction was recommended by Gov. William M. Bennett at a luncheon with 50 Detroit business and industrial leaders who are boosters of the fair.
A 300,000 attendance, the largest in the fair's 83 years' existence, is expected.
The price cut is expected to result in more concessions at the fair, better business for them and the "Midway" shows, increased patronage of the grandstand attractions; a greater number of industrial and agricultural exhibitors and financial profit for the fair from the increased total expected at the gates; more concessions; a greater share from its percentage of the increased "Midway" show income and from the grandstand fees.

Runs For Office Of County Prosecutor

Arthur F. Bogue

Promising an independent campaign without allegiance to political factions, Arthur F. Bogue, a local attorney, today issued a formal statement regarding his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for county prosecuting attorney in the September primaries.
A member of the law firm of Keeling and Bogue, Mr. Bogue has practiced law for 12 years in both state and federal courts. He was educated at Green Castle academy, DePaul University and the University of Michigan. Mr. Bogue and his never held of any fraternal organization.
His statement, following the filing of his petition for judicial office is faced with two possible courses of procedure: On the one hand, to direct his campaign as to guarantee his election, regardless of the methods employed, and on the other hand to win the election by the most honorable and without sacrifice of independence.
"Where election regardless of the means is the only way to the candidate's often prompted to ally himself with factions or persons whose purposes are not his own good, but the settlement of some personal or political grievance. Such alliances do not terminate with the election, but usually persist, hanging on like barnacles to the bottom of a ship, hindering the candidate throughout his full term of office."
"This same desire for protest also leads to many high sounding slogans and promises. Such promises are easily made and are just as easily broken. The candidate who promises to do anything but give nothing better than a poor administration."
"It is also this desire for votes which leads to the promise of remuneration of the kind or 'an other' usually in the form of appointments and positions. In such cases the successful candidate after election finds himself confronted with the obligation of other things, but apparently and favors regardless of qualifications and to the detriment of the interest of the public."

A large attendance is expected from Birmingham at the American Legion State Convention which will be held at Birmingham on Aug. 21, 22 and 23. Four delegates and four alternates will attend the July meeting of the Eastern Michigan Motorbus garage crashed into the rear of a truck driven by Harold Buswell, 26 years old, 200 West Dayton street, Flint. Both vehicles were travelling north. No one was injured.
Wetherholt had been drinking, police said.
The Final Test
"I thought you said this bathing suit was in fash colors," said the customer, indignantly. "Why every confounded stripe in it has come off on my back."
"Ah, but wait," said the shopman, shavily, "wait until you try to get them off your back—then you'll see."

LOOKS AT LIFE

By EDWIN M. CLARK
While we have a super abundance of all the widely varied gifts of nature and the keenly disposed man-power to put them in shape for human use this instantly brings about a normal state of industry; but the mass intelligence is not bringing about that desired status. There is no physical or social cause held up in our present industriously-paralytic state.
The interdependence of industry arbitrarily demands a concert of action. A few of our people cannot become normal in action by themselves. Practically the entire field must be active to create a fully compensating buying power—that is normalcy.
There may be a small percentage of our industries which are hampered by a lack of capital. In my herein proposed solution of our present inactivity, the government could make loans to such concerns with a minimum of loss to the taxpayer. The government could make loans to such concerns with a minimum of loss to the taxpayer. The government could make loans to such concerns with a minimum of loss to the taxpayer.
Public expense for construction of no immediate necessity may be a relief for today, but it incurs an actual burden upon tomorrow. All that is needed is a program of necessities. A major element of our present status rests in the fact that cities, counties and nations have burdened themselves with debts nominated in cheap dollars which are being paid in far more valuable dollars than the money they fail to realize that the value of a dollar rests in the amount of endeavor required to obtain it.
Now to a solution: Why cannot some loud voice that of our country which every industry in the country shall resume normal production in pre-war activity? Such a concerted action would immediately produce the normal mass buying power, and the normal production would soon be consumed. Would not a request of our Congress be accepted as a national emergency? Let the popular confidence in results. Would not proprietary interests give it a test?
I am fully aware that the question of rate of wage is a most troublesome one. But the change in value of our dollar, and the inflation that is, and will remain, a feature of any solution. Our motto for the moment should be to get our money into debt nominally in cheap dollars, and to pay them in expensive dollars, as a real reason for keeping wages high.
High wages will wipe out the debts more easily, and will not all the people adjust themselves in the money? Naturally the limited percentage of our people who have accumulated money prefer that their money retain its present high purchasing power. But the tolling mass of our people prefer, rightly, that money be kept out of their hands which their debts were nominally.
Rate Is Unimportant
So far as present necessities are concerned it matters little what the rate of wage is. Prices will adjust themselves in a fair relation.
What we want is ACTION. If science and invention have made us so productive that 10 hours of creative effort is not required, the 10 hours of creative effort of the future would allow us more time for culture, recreation and ease.
How can we induce our Congress to speak? My claimed remedy may seem weak in its extreme simplicity, but I cannot see why it would not bring the much desired results.
