Writer To Address Club On Flowers Of Michigan

C. W. Woods of Copemish, Mich., who will address a joint meeting of the Bloomfield Hills, Birmingham and Pontiac branches of the Women's National Farm and Garden Association, Monday, Mar. 21, is well known as a writer for horticultural publications.

Mr. Woods is a contributor to "Horticulture," publication of the National Horticultural Society and to the "Florists' Review."

The meeting will be held at the Guild Hall, Christ Church Cranbrook, at 2:30 P. M. Mr. Woods' address will be "Native Wild Flowers."

Michigan Girl Safe, Word From East Informs Sister

Through official channels at Washington, D. C. Mrs. Russell McBride of Dorchester road received word Monday of the safety of her sister, Miss Marguerite Dutton, who sailed from San Francisco on Jan. 22 for China.

The message stated, Mrs. McBride explained, that Miss Dutton is temporarily serving as secretary to Nelson Johnson, American minister to China, stationed at Peking. Miss Dutton, who has been in China for the past three years, was formerly secretary to the American consul at Nanking.

At Christmas time she returned to this country to spend the holidays with her family at Marquette, Mich., returning in January. The last word received by her relatives was from Honolulu on Jan. 28, until the message arrived from Washington.

Miss Dutton is well known in Birmingham and was graduated from Baldwin High School in 1920.

Miss Betty Neal of Oakland avenue was recently appointed swimming instructor at Camp Kairthree on Lake Charlevoix for the coming season. She will be accompanied by her sister, Rosemary, who will attend the camp.

The Women's Missionary Society of the Redeemer Lutheran Church, Lincoln avenue near Woodward avenue, will hold a bake sale Saturday at 145 Woodward avenue. Mrs. T. A. Neal of Oakland avenue, president of the Missionary Society, is in charge of arrangements.

From A WOMAN'S ANGLE

By MARJORIE ELAINE PORTER

Cinderella sat among the ashes and wept. Her step-family had stepped out. There was a big party on, but Cinderella didn't own a presentable frock. She had thought of going like Gandhi, then she remembered it wasn't a costume ball. She didn't even have a box of good powder couldn't find a comb or a hairbrush. She had made a brave attempt to find these little accessories, but her step sisters used rachele. As she was the only blond in the family, nobody bought her color. She was out of luck and out of funds.

But worst of all was the fact that she had burned her eyelashes lighting the fires and candles as usual family-fire-lighter.

"Now I am a sight," she sobbed as she surveyed her tear-swollen visage in the mirror.

"I have something new in eyelashes, young lady, in which I think you will be interested," said a voice behind her.

"I'm not interested in anything if it costs a nickel," said Cinderella, wiping her eyes on her apron.

"Well, you're not very sociable if you are broke!" said the voice. Whereupon Cinderella turned around to behold her fairy godmother.

"Fancy you here," she exclaimed.

"You'd better step on it, sister, or you'll be late for the party," advised the kind old fairy godmother.

"I'm not going," Cinderella sobbed, getting off to a fresh start with a second round of weeping.

"Nonsense," said the F. G. "This is a real opportunity. The Prince is home. You're the best looking in your family. I hate to pull the blonde about gentleman preferring blonds, but as blonds go, you're a box office attraction. Now get in to this chiffon thing. Here's your cream, powder, rouge, lip stick, and—"

"You're very kind, but boo hoo," wept Cindy, "I haven't any eye-lashes. I burned them off. Oh, boo—"

"Don't boo me. I never did go for 'boos' from the gallery. Now listen, did you hear me say when I first came in, that I had something in eyelashes which I thought would interest you?"

"Of course there's nothing new about false eyelashes. We used to buy them by the inch, you recall, when they were fastened to a kind of adhesive tape, which we pasted on the eyelid?"

"This method, however, had its disadvantages. One was, that at close range you could see the tape, and the trick was discovered. But now we have schemes of dipping false eye lashes in a harmless fluid and pasting them on the eyelid on a set time. They are waterproof and wind proof."

"They will last for several weeks. When you get them all pasted on, I forgot to tell you, you can trim the ends so that all will be the same length. Now sit down here and let me fix your make-up."

A transformed Cinderella appeared at the ball, danced with the Prince, and left on the stroke of midnight.

Her fairy godmother was waiting for her when she limped in without one slipper.

"Never mind, the prince found my shoe!" she said. "He says he's going to marry the girl it belongs to. Oh joy, what a boy! And he's mine!"

"Well," her fairy godmother smiled, "Cindy, I guess you've won."

"There were more beauties at the ball tonight than there are in Hollywood, but he chose me! I won!"

"Yes," commented her F. G. with a chuckle. "You won by an eyelash!"

Brings Relief Plan

Mrs. Cecelia Hasselstrom. A plan new to this country for bringing relief to the unemployed is related by Mrs. Cecelia Hasselstrom, noted Finnish journalist. In her home city, Helsingfors, women out of work are teaching vocational classes in line with their professional skills. Mrs. Hasselstrom states. These classes are open for a fee to women who are in business but want to acquire greater proficiency. Courses are offered free to women out of work. The plan is being sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's club of Helsingfors.
