CLUB AND PERSONAL NOTES

Book Sale Brings Requests Varying From Cook Books To Greek Literature

With repeated requests for a varied number of wanted books ranging from Greek literature to the average kitchen variety of cook books, members of the American Association of University Women conducting their annual book sale at 202 Wabeek Building, have appealed to Birmingham's reading public for additional contributions.

The sale opened Monday with results comparing favorably with those of the first day a year ago, the committee reports. Many calls have come in for books and magazines among those donated for the sale so far. To meet the demand, Mrs. H. H. Wellman, general chairman, has asked those in Birmingham who have these books to offer, so inform her or bring them to the sales room.

With many women doing their own housekeeping these days, the book trade has risen in popularity and is in considerable demand, according to those in charge of book sales. Many requests have been made for cook books of any description.

Numerous calls have also come in for the Popular Mechanics Magazine, and for the Reader's Digest, issue of June, 1931. Requests have been made also for "Polly of the Circus," "Alice of Old Vincennes," for the Baldwinian of 1929 and 1930, the life of Sir Walter Scott by any author, novels on the French Revolution, and the American Magazine for July, 1926.

Kipling's "Just So" stories are also in demand as are "The House by the River" by Herbert, "A Lantern in Her Hand" by Aldrich, "A Vagabond's House" by Bandini, "Twelve Centuries of English Prose and Poetry" "Science and Health" by Mary Baker Eddy, Shakespearian plays, including "Othello," and "Cymbaline," Greek literature with a special request for Plato, and others.

Magazines or books on art and the study of silhouettes, books on the crafts, including jewelry and pottery making, medical or law books and maps of all kinds, have also been called for, the committee reports.

The sale will continue through the week, Mrs. George R. Averill is chairman of the sales committee.

DeMolays Make Plans For Annual Fall Dance

Autumn leaves, pumpkins and corn stalks will adorn the Community House, Friday evening, Oct. 28, when the Hasebecca Chapter, Order of DeMolay, will hold its annual fall dance.

Coming as it does, near Hallowe'en, the decorations will be characteristic, and a fortune teller will add to the evening's entertainment.

Jack Dawson is chairman of the committee in charge, which will include Earl Morrow, Elmer Ruston, Wayne White and Roy Stockwell.

Assisting as hostesses will be the Misses Harriet Brelsford, Betty Burgess, Margaret Foster and Marvel Carson.

Dancing will begin at 9 and continue until 1 o'clock.

Mrs. Raymond W. Reilly of Oak street returned Sunday from Montclair, N. J. where she was the guest of Mrs. L. R. Comstock.

School Board Plans Reception For Superintendent

A community reception in honor of Charles W. Crandell, superintendent of schools, and Mrs. Crandell will be given by members of the Board of Education at the Community House Nov. 2, from 8 to 10 P. M., it was announced today.

Assisting the Board will be local organizations. Invitation is extended to all parents and others interested in attending, as the reception will be of an informal nature. A musical program is being arranged for the evening by the committee in charge.

Junior High School To Be Subject Of Address

The history and aims of the junior high school will be discussed today by Howard D. Cruff, principal of Barnum School, in an address at the school before members of the Parent-Teacher Associations of Pierce and Barnum Schools, the Womens' Literary Club, the Birmingham Branch of the American Association of University Women and the Birmingham League of Women Voters.

The five groups are co-operating in the presentation of a series of talks on educational problems, the second of which will be given by Mr. Cruff. The third in the series will take place at Baldwin Public Library, Thursday, Oct. 27, when the curriculum and extra-curricular activities will be the subject for discussion.

Following the address at the meeting today, members of the Barnum P. T. A. will hold a business meeting at 4 P. M., after which tea will be served. Mrs. Norman Porter is social chairman, assisted by Mrs. Arthur C. Peck and the hospitality committee.

Members of the executive board of the Barnum P. T. A. met Tuesday and adopted the program for the year as submitted by Mrs. J. H. Rosso, program chairman. The work of the year will be based on the general subject, "Youth, and Its Relation to the Church, Community and School." The board also voted an appropriation of $5 for purchase of books for the Barnum School Library.

WE HEARD IT SAID BY—

Charles W. Crandell, superintendent of schools: "I believe that our schools are running as smoothly as can reasonably be expected, when the handicaps under which we are working are considered. I wish to commend the pupils for their conduct, and for the earnest way in which they seem to be attacking their problems. I also wish to commend the teachers for the splendid spirit and co-operative attitude they have taken. Such loyal support as they have evidenced is very heartening indeed."

Quilt Exhibit Stirs Memories Of Past

In a modern world of machine-made products one seldom finds time to admire and wonder at the exquisite beauty and patient skill found in the handiwork of those who lived and toiled generations past.

An opportunity will be presented to pay homage to the art and workmanship of women who expressed their love of beauty in long hours at the quilting frame, when an exhibit of quilts, old and new, and hand-woven spreads will be shown at the First Methodist Church Friday, Nov. 11.

Many interesting stories have been revealed in the history of the quilts, coming down from generation to generation.

Mrs. Scott A. Hersey of West Maple avenue, the possessor of a large collection of 65 beautiful quilts and hand-woven coverlets, has selected several with histories to enter in the exhibit.

The first, a Kersey coverlet, was made in the year 1853 for the dowry of Esther Beech, the great-grandmother of Mrs. Hersey who lived on the former Ruben Beech sheep farm in Troy, now the Ralph Stoeple Estate.

The men on the farm sheered the sheep and the women took the wool to Stony Creek, where there was a loom, and had it woven. They then dyed it and fashioned it into a coverlet.

Mrs. Hersey mentioned the interesting fact that the family still holds the deed of purchase for the farm which was bought from the government in the year 1819. The deed was written on sheepskin.

Two other quilts are so old they are lined with materials now extinct. Another coverlet, over 100 years old, was brought with the family in a sailboat from Buffalo to Detroit, a trip of three days.

Mrs. Cassius Carter of George street will exhibit a unique blue and white "Bird of Paradise" pattern, hand-woven spread which was made 150 years ago for Sarah N. Van Fleet, a member of the family.

Lucia Nunamaker, grandmother of Mrs. James W. Parry of Oakland avenue, married many years ago against the wishes of the aunt with whom she lived, and pioneered to Minnesota. She was cut off in the family in a sailboat from Buffalo to Detroit, a trip of three days.
