through in the artistic competition, but a large number of American writers, artists, and musicians were included in the group, he said.

Only Foreign Member Mr. Saarinen, widely-known for his beautiful architecture in the Scandinavian motif, including not only most of the Cranbrook Foundation, but also such important contributions to modern European architecture as the beautiful central railway station in Helsingfors and other governmental buildings, was chosen for the architecture jury of the competition to prevent its being entirely American. He is considered one of the world's top-rank authorities on not only architecture, but on many forms of art. This is not the first time he has been an Olympic judge, as he served on a competition jury at the Paris Olympic Games in 1924.
