Hollywood Has Backdoor To Fame

Hopefuls Must "Crash Gate" To Gain Contracts

By ANDREW R. BOON HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Year after year the "big shots" of the motion picture industry...

For two years Dorothy Wilson, of Minneapolis, worked at a studio as a stenographer. Daily directors and casting agents walked through her office without so much as a glance in her direction.

Then, one day, a director, needing an extra hurriedly, carried her along to the set. She never had a screen test, so they sent her back to pass before a movie camera.

Donella Donaldson, until recently spent her days sketching theater people. The same director who "found" Miss Wilson tried Miss Donaldson in a small part, changed her name to Billie Hayden and today she has a contract.

When truth and honesty are set up as the two goals of endeavor in politics and business, human achievement will far surpass any attainment noted in the "old times" of prosperity.

"Personally, I've reached the conclusion that the best thing I want to return to is 'old times'." Mr. Forsyth said.

Stating a demand for "cleaner politics, for cleaner business," he said: "You can take out all the amendments and half the body of the Federal Constitution, substitute for them the goals of truth and honesty, and have a better form of government than you have today."
