Probably few persons know that the proprietor of Matthew's Tailor Shop, 244 Briggs Building, is not "Mr. Matthew."

—Arnold Phak
Mr. Cammarere

Mr. Cammarere began making men's trousers at the age of nine in Tregani, Italy, his birthplace, after being apprenticed to a master tailor to work after school hours.
 He came to this country when 15 years old, following a Detroit an older sister who had preceded him there by a year. The war fever seized him shortly after hostilities began and he joined Company 210 Engineers in 1917 when it was necessary for him to "grow a half year over night" to qualify for admission.
 Eight months in Company Tailor at Camp Center were followed by service overseas in which he took part in the St. Mihiel and Argonne-Meuse offensive and spent seven months with the army of Occupation in Austria and Germany.
 Strained international relations prevented him from visiting his parents during the War, but he made a long visit to Italy shortly after his return following a period of employment with Newcomb Endicott in Detroit, and went back again for a shorter stay with his family 2 1/2 years ago.
 Mr. Cammarere, who secured his final citizenship paper May 25, 1918, will celebrate next week the seventh anniversary of the date of his entering business in Birmingham.

There is practically no phase of the automobile industry with which Bon Jordan, manager of the Jordan Chevrolet Company, South Woodward avenue at Ruffner street, is not acquainted by actual experience.

Mr. Jordan

In the 14 years since 1918, he has held various positions with different business organizations from New York to Oregon, but always his activities have been circumscribed by the automobile field, whether in the factory as assembly, service, promotion, repair or sales divisions.
 Immediately before coming to Birmingham two years ago last month, Mr. Jordan was associated for three years with the Tucker and Jordan Chevrolet Company in Detroit.
 Though his business assignments have carried him over a major portion of the United States, he was born in Detroit and received his preliminary and high school education there. Later he attended the University of Michigan.
 During the relatively short period of his residence in Birmingham, he has taken a leading part in community enterprises as well as achieving top rank in the village's business life. His energy was one of the chief factors in the success of the Grand Trunk celebration last year, of which he was executive chairman. He is also an officer in the Lions Club, was chairman of the Y. M. C. A. campaign last fall, and headed the "Committee of 100" which came to the aid of the Board of Education last winter by stimulating the payment of school taxes.
