'Know Your Town' Is Slogan of Campaign Planned By League of Women Voters

By MARJORIE ELAINE PORTER

Under the slogan "Know Your Town," the Birmingham League of Women Voters is completing plans to launch a municipal study campaign this fall for the purpose of stimulating public interest in the various agencies of government and in the manner of handling city affairs.

A definite plan, as endorsed by the National League of Women Voters, was adopted Monday at a meeting of the board of directors of the local branch, held at the home of Mrs. Angus D. McLay of Windsor drive, president of the Birmingham League.

Mrs. Paton in Charge

The campaign will be conducted by the study class of the League, under the direction of Mrs. C. R. Paton, legislative chairman of the local organization. It will include a comprehensive study of the city, beginning with a review of the historical background and the development of its population, Mrs. Paton announced.

Under 10 main topics, every branch of the municipal government will be studied. City officials will be invited to discuss their respective departments of work, and League committees will in turn inspect other departments in operation, as part of the campaign.

Special attention will be paid to living conditions, which will include a study of the scale of rentals in comparison with incomes, and various problems of home owners. The study of public health conditions and facilities for protection is another classification in the plan.

Under the topic of education, the League will consider the qualifications of the members of the Board of Education and the superintendent of schools. The question of the advisability of qualified women to serve as members of the School Board will also be discussed, Mrs. Paton announced.

To Study School Courses

A question concerning the curriculum of the schools which the League will attempt to answer is as to whether the subjects taught in the lower grades "fit boys and girls for the normal responsibilities of life." The proportion of the school budget in relation to the municipal budget is another phase of the educational system which will be considered.

Recreational facilities, including parks, playgrounds and the types of motion pictures shown at the local theater form an important division in the League's municipal study plan. The League will devise a check-up plan, Mrs. Paton explained, to determine whether the motion pictures shown have been approved by the National Board of Review, and what the report of the Board is concerning each.

Public provision for the care of the dependent and delinquent in the community and working conditions for those employed will be investigated also.

A study of streets, transportation and public utilities as another division of the plan, will include an investigation of traffic rules and their enforcement, the adequacy of the sewage system, the provision made for garbage disposal, and the rates charged by the local public utilities.

City Planning on Program

City planning and courts and juries are two other topics in the study campaign, the final one of which comprises a survey of the local government. Under the latter head are such questions as "What services does your city government provide?", "What is the bonded indebtedness of your city?", "What limit does the State Constitution set upon the borrowing power of your city?", "How is the authority to spend the county's and city's money granted?", "What is the per capita assessment?", "What percentage of taxes are used for local government?"

Assisting Mrs. Paton in the campaign will be the chairman of the various departments and committees of the Birmingham League. As each topic is considered, the chairman under whose jurisdiction it falls will take an active part in the investigation.

Chairmen Named

Those in charge of the divisions of work, co-operating with the legislative chairman, include Mrs. G. Hall Roosevelt, chairman of living costs; Mrs. Lewis B. Sappington, chairman of education; Mrs. Paton is also chairman of the department of efficiency in government; Mrs. William Coit Allen, legal status of women; Mrs. Fred D. Farrar, social hygiene; Mrs. F. F. McKinney, women in industry; and Mrs. L. A. Morgan, chairman of the committee on publications.

The first general meeting of the League will be held the fourth Monday in September, Mrs. McLay announced. This plan will follow throughout the year, with the first three Mondays of each month devoted to meetings of the study class.

The purposes and functions of the League will be reviewed at the first meeting, Mrs. McLay explained.

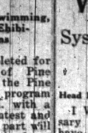
Boorishness In College-Bred Women Decried By Dr. Myers

System Assailed For Tendency To Teach Egotism Rather Than Humility

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Department Parent Education, Western Reserve University

I WISH every girl with necessary health and mentality might have a college education. I also wish that no college graduate would be so boorish as to lord it over those not college bred. Why should a college training magnify this savage trait?



Dr. Garry C. Myers

Apparently women with college degrees use this weapon over other women more often than them feel inferior more often than do college men so lord it over other men.

If my observations are correct, it is the married college woman more often than the unmarried one who "feels her oats" in the presence of the wife with no degree.

No doubt I am talking of a very small percentage of college women; that the many descriptions I have read and heard from young mothers of how inferior they are made to feel in the presence of college graduates often are exaggerated; that some of these sufferers have let their imagination build up foolish notions.

Nevehtheless, scores of young women who know they have inherent ability are enduring untold agonies because they believe they are looked down upon by women college bred. A few do, I am sure, have valid grounds for this belief.

Now, since the college woman has the vantage ground, she might take the initiative in an effort to relieve the non-college woman with whom she associates from needless feelings of inferiority. To succeed at such measures would seem to be victory for character and culture.

One would like to think of higher education as a means of cultivating charity and sympathy in the student, or fostering a refinement, which would make others feel more comfortable in her presence, rather than less so.

To my knowledge, there is no text book for college courses which aims to make the student adequately humble in relation to others less favored with opportunities for formal education. Instead, the whole atmosphere of college life tends to stamp the student with an undue and untrue awareness of superiority over those who never have attended college.

Unconsciously, we school people in general have assigned to ourselves a "superior place," which not only has tended to make more timid the non-college tagged, but has also hindered us from enjoying as we should those frequently our superiors, and kept us from learning from their wealth of wisdom. If they only knew it, they could often bring us to our knees before them. Blessed is the non-college woman who has so much perspective, self-regard and sense of humor as to rise above the feeling.

I should like to hear from my readers on this subject.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

Written For Central Press and The Birmingham Eccentric

By E. V. SHEPARD

FAMOUS BRIDGE TEACHER

FORCING THE DECLARER

OBLIGING the declarer to trump when he does not want to do so, is termed "forcing." Many a contract may be defeated by such tactics. On this hand, South made 4 odd at hearts, when West made an opening lead of a low trump. Supposing West had led his Q of clubs, forcing the dummy to win with the Ace. Would that lead have defeated the game contract?

	♠K 6 ♥J 7 6 ♦Q 9 8 2 ♣A J 8 7
♠Q 10 7 ♥Q 9 8 5 ♦K 7 6 ♣Q 10 3	North West East South	♠9 5 4 ♥10 ♦A J 10 3 ♣K 9 6 4 2
	♠A J 8 3 2 ♥A K 4 3 2 ♦5 4 ♣5

Having won the first trick with dummy's Ace of clubs the declarer will lead the K and Ace of spades. Dummy will establish the spades by trumping the third round. South will regain his hand by trumping a club. He then must back a club, and force South to ruff with his last low heart. Dummy will have the lone J of trumps; the declarer will have only the Ace and K, but West will hold the 9-8-5. If South leads two rounds of trumps he must then lose one trump trick and three diamond tricks. As West already has won a trick with his Q of hearts, this will put the contract down two tricks.

If South leads a good spade, West will trump and dummy will overtrump, but the declarer will have to trump a club or the third round of diamonds to get into his own hand, leaving a lone trump in West's hand, which will cause the contract to go down a trick. Only poor play by West can fail to put the contract down if the opening lead is a club.

As West doubtless will hesitate to lead a club, after dummy has bid that suit, on account of the danger of giving South discards, West can defeat the contract by leading a diamond, FORCING the declarer on the third lead of the suit. The declarer will have to use another of his trumps to regain entry to his own hand after having dummy ruff a third lead of spades. When the declarer leads a small heart toward dummy it will take the last trump heart that South has. The declaration will be defeated by an opening lead of diamonds, whether West wins with his Q or not, when a low heart is led toward dummy.
