

EXHIBITS DISPLAYED AT FRANKLIN VILLAGE

Exhibits Reveal Artistry And Skill in Arrangement Decisions of Judges Based on Quality And Placing of Blooms

By MARJORIE ELAINE PORTER

When Gray mourned in his party, for which she received honorarium money, that "all many flowers bloom to blush unseen and wear the sweetness on the desert air" he did not anticipate the modern flower show.

His melancholy might easily have been dispelled had his poetic phrase been permitted to drop in to the annual spring flower show of the Birmingham branch of the Women's National Farm and Garden Association held at the Community House Monday afternoon.

Arrangements With Prizes

There is no flower, "blushed unseen" to all were artistically arranged for admiring eyes. Some of the most artistic arrangement, the floral psychology of the group here is deserving of comment. At least this is the impression one gained at the show Monday afternoon, like any other work of art, it is placed in the right setting, just as a picture must be hung in the best of light, so the flower show.

This idea was skillfully conveyed to the visually exhibit. The show was arranged in a series of still life paintings that a mirror display. Throughout, the arrangement and one entire section was devoted to this classification. The distinction for color and proportion.

In this group also were displayed the arrangement of breakfast or dining table with flowers, and a series of still life bouquets of flowers in a variety of containers. A charming little china set arranged in a still life, and a series of still life bouquets of flowers in a variety of containers.

Ann McDonald, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford McDonald, was a special center of attraction in this class, with her tiny table set for a doll's tea.

Missionary Meeting To Be Held For Young People

About 60 young people in the Detroit District of the Methodist Church will gather at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall M. Morgan at Elizabeth Lake this week-end to attend the summer missionary conference.

Among the features of the conference will be a pleasant presentation of the yellow fever and the malaria, and the founding and growth of the United Fruit Company in India, which grew from a school in a mud hut with six native pupils to one of the largest concerns for native ownership in the world.

Home Nuptials Unite Couple

Bliss of pink and white peonies and yellow gerberas formed a floral background for the marriage of Miss Grace Adele Wiley, daughter of Mrs. A. A. Wiley, of Southfield avenue, and Charles LeClair Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Taylor of Lakeview.

The ceremony was performed at 3 o'clock in the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. M. J. Hopkins of the First Methodist Church, with the Rev. Russell C. Smith, pastor of the church, officiating.

Mrs. Wiley was a lovely bride in a beaming afternoon frock of rose crepe, made of a lace of the same material. A bouquet of pink and white peonies and yellow gerberas formed a floral background for the marriage.

Child Should Be Encouraged To Smile By His Parents
