Coming Back To Earth

Coming Back To Earth

One of the delights of a trip through life is to meet a scinillatingly intelligent man or woman. There are too five he them on earth. Most of us are required, willingly or leatily, to live in a very narrow world; our outlook upon the universe may often be focused through mall field glasses at a football game, but too seldon's in the focused through a large observatory telescope, where the stars and the celestral plantes swingsite and life us to regarderation of spirit and purpose.

Such an interesting human being is Chase Salmon Obekripe, former Goverinor of Michigan, whose more thail? Sy years of wandering observations of people and things has made him a semarable character, He used to be a newspaperman at the Soon. In 19th the second of t

A few days ago Mr. Obborne talked to the seniors of Brenau College, in Gainville, Georgia. What he said may interest and help you in these trying days if this Economic Regeneration. Speaketh he:
"Sweet potatoes and black-eyed peas and cine syrup and combreded and greens from one's own garden, and milk from one's own cows, are still as tasteful and a mourishing as food ever was. Labor still den prodhecthem. There is life, liberty and the putsuit of happines till to be had on thousandl upon thousands off agres in the United States. It remains entirely possible for every man or woman to be comfortable and happy in this country if they know enough to spend a little less than they earn.
"It became epidemic for some to despise work of the hadds and desire only professional cateers. It betogan to be considered more honorable to be a polor doofor a shyster lawyer or a sliphod teacher than to be a first-class carpenter or a successful farmer. I have hever understood why it has been interpreted as a currethat inen shall earn their bread by the sweat of the how. There is work some place; somehow for every idle hand. It may require a geographic redistribution, a backing out of the malestroms of the cities into the poetry and plenty of the country.
"There is nothing the matter with the world. What is wrong with the people on the earth at this montesher results of living beyond their means, for putposes of war of pleasure. If great numbers of people in America no longer are to make a living in the cities that is not catastrophe; The country shall come into its own again, that is all.

Maybe men will not soon again mortgage their homes and their farms to buy ears and join solf clubs when rambling in the woods and hunting and fishing couts less and is a thousand times as enjoyable, improving and healthful."

Soldiers Are Mars' Sons

SOIGETS ATE MAIRS SOIGS You see many, many pictures of soldiers of various.
European countries, each bearing arms as they stage this or that celebration. Those soldiers and their multikets can mean only one thing. DEATH. The numbers of those Men o' Mars is sever on the increase in Europe Those soldiers will, like drivith cattle, be ruished into some conflict if SELFISHNESS and HATE become uncontrolled in some portion of some nation's affairs.

For a while John will John Barkey Corn as an outlaw. For a while John will well with us in a sort of peace, the will then become loud and noisy and, as cittzens again band together to make him obedient, he will rebel and eventually be banished by 1sw. That is, unless human being a reable to be temperate in their acquaintance with John. And you can hardly expect moderation and temperance from today's human nature, can you?

National Sins

Generally spaking, the person who commits a deep wrong finds at easier to repeat the offense than he did to commit the original sin. The same thing is true of a government. Repudation at Washington of the gold obligation of contracts is a diagrenous precedent for a nation to include in, for it takes your snonetury system out of the hands of a control that is regulated by Mother Nature, and places it in the fickle and selfish hands of human nature. However, we live in a world of contract has a diagrenous precedent for a nation to include in, for it takes your snonetury system out of the hands of a control that is regulated by Mother Nature, and places it in the fickle and selfish hands of human nature.
