IN MEMORIAM

IN MEMORY of Mrs. Maude Stephens Carey
Oh! we loved her, yes, we loved her,
And the angels loved her more;
So the golden gates were opened,
When she entered home;
While the evening shades are falling
I am here all alone.
But hearts there comes a longing, if only could come home.
Mother, Father, Sisters and brothers.

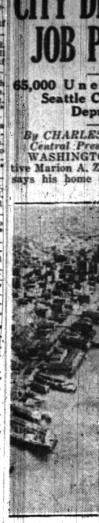
CITY DEFEATS JOB PROBLEM

65,000 Unemployed In Seattle Colony Defy Depression

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON—Representative Marion A. Zioncheck of Seattle says his home city has been the most successful in solving the unemployment problem.



"Seattle's job," he says, "is as they must be solved, and the explaining is left to Seattle's leadership in Editor Branin, of the vanguard, a former radical who, seeing no progress in long pedding business and industrial stagnation, undertook to organize its vic-

"His plan was to maintain the independence of the followers and preserve the working, fighting spirit in them. Families, of course, the three essentials—shelter, food and clothing.

Group Welfare

"For convenience now in the interest of cohesion, assembled them, as far as possible. Recognizing how the acceptance of individual charity kills self-respect, these folks refused to deal with welfare agencies and collectively. They did accept some aid, but as a group.

"The settlement grew. It reached 14,000 heads of families—a population of 65,000.

"Among these colonists, most trades and professions were and still are represented—lumbermen, fishermen, carpenters, masons, mechanics, barbers, physicians, dentists, architects, lawyers; yes, and a few men who, three or four years ago, could have written checks in at least six figures.

"Work is partly cooperative; in part there is an exchange of services.

"The community has its own commissaries. For what they supply, the barber clips hair a specified number of heads daily; the doctor visits patients; the lawyer defends the colonists' interests before the city council, or in court occasionally.

Other Services

"Several tumbledown houses have been acquired and rebuilt. Shoes are cobbled into serviceability. Wornout clothes are made wearable.

"A demand existed for fence-posts on neighboring farms and cut-over timber land has been cleared to supply them, in exchange for agricultural products. Fuel has come from the same source. Also several old mines have been reopened. The fishermen have done well. Canning on a considerable scale has been developed. At first there was a shortage of glass jars, and a committee reclaimed dozens of them from nearby cemeteries.

"Incidentally, the colony has elected three members to the Seattle board of aldermen.

"And no doubt I am indebted to it for my seat in Congress."

Bitter Enemies

Having tasted this sort of independence, do the colonists like it, despite its hardships? Or will they return to more orthodox ways of living at the earliest opportunity?

"Why, it may seem odd," said the representative, "but the enterprise has bitter enemies. Many critics complain that it has created a dangerous political power. A vigorous effort is being made to break it up; to put the colonists on a basis of individual charity—a few dollars each from the community chest, per family.

"Whether or not it will survive this attack is problematic."

EAR-WIGGLING? 'TWAS OLD JUNGLE CUSTOM

ANN ARBOR—Folks who can proudly wiggle their ears, to the envy of friends, should be taken down a peg by the information that they have inherited in a strong degree a muscular trick common to our very remote ancestors.

The ear-wiggler is something of a throwback, at least so far as this particular set of muscles is concerned, Prof. R. C. Hussey of the University of Michigan told his historical geology class. Hair "stands on end," in fright because the shock activates other holdover, ancestrial muscles, usually quiescent.

It is merely another sign that there are still relationships between man and his distant apelike ancestors, whose hair commonly bristles in anger or fright.

PEANUT MACHINE STOLEN BY DINERS

Two men who entered the White Tower Restaurant, 105 South Woodward avenue, early last Thursday morning, took a peanut vending machine valued at $10 on their way out, the proprietor reported to police.

Then They Mixed

First Pug—"Let me tell you one thing, big boy, I'm not two-faced anyway!"

Second Pug—"That's easy to believe. If you were you wouldn't be wearing that one."

Scouts To Solicit Papers Monthly

A monthly solicitation for old newspapers and magazines by Birmingham Boy Scouts, beginning Saturday, April 8, and continuing on the first, Saturday of each month thereafter except during the summer, was announced yesterday by B. J. Meirow, chairman of the committee in charge.

Revenue from the sale of the papers will be divided equally between the troops and the District committee, Mr. Meirow said. Other members of his committee are James J. Martindale, James W. Parry and Paul N. Averill.

The drives, which furnish the self-supporting scout troops with their only means of revenue, have been held at irregular intervals during the past, but will be continued on a regular monthly basis beginning April 8, according to the committee's plans.

KEMP WILL PLAY IN CRANBROOK RECITAL

Dr. William Lloyd Kemp, local physician and city health officer, a talented amateur musician, will be the guest organist for the regular Sunday afternoon organ recital at Christ Church Cranbrook next Sunday, from 4:45 to 5:15 P. M. Dr. Kemp, a member of the Christ Church parish, has been a member of the Detroit Orpheus Club for several years and is a pianist and organist of high accomplishments. He will replace William Hall Miner, regular organist and bellmaster of the church, for the recital Sunday afternoon, playing compositions of Dubois, Kinder, Stamits, Gretchaninoff and Lemaigre.

RESTAURANT OWNER WINS DAMAGE CLAIM

Judge Frank L. Doty returned a $450 judgment in Circuit Court last Thursday in favor of Mrs. Hattie Frank, owner and operator, with her husband, Gus Frank, of the Pure Food Restaurant, 116 North Woodward avenue.

The judgement was the outgrowth of a suit Mrs. Frank brought against the City Grocery and Meat Company of Detroit asking for damages because her restaurant was closed for three days on an attachment obtained by the defendant company. It was brought out in the suit that the attachment had been obtained against a former owner of the restaurant and not against Mrs. Frank.

WE HEARD IT SAID BY—

J. B. Howarth, local insurance agent: "If all business were founded and operated more on the ideal of real service, and less mere pecuniary profit, there would be fewer business upsets, and scarcely any depressions."
