Exhibit Reflects Varied Interests Bowling

Birmingham Girl's Art Work Includes Endless in Many Fields. By CLARE E. UNGER. A purely imaginative world of half humorous, half grotesque little animals and people awaits the explorations of visitors to an exhibit of the creative work of Miss Marjorie Phillips, now current at the Artists' Market on South Woodward avenue.

Miss Phillips, a Birmingham girl and former pupil of the Cranbrook Academy of Art, and of the Chicago Art Academy, displays such wide diversity of interest in things artistic that it finds no limitations, ceramics, pencil sketches, baked clay and needlework craft all within the range of her very talented fingers, but with her happy-looking animals and figures dominating the exhibit.

Not only does she portray the merely decorative possibilities of the materials she uses; she has on display a number of interesting book ends, ash trays, candlesticks and bowls to prove their utilitarian value as well.

Among the more interesting pieces of ceramic work are a polished black cat which sits, contentedly, on a polished black base, several interesting masks, a spirited orchid colored horse and a number of fairy tale days and an unpolished head of a Japanese woman. In addition, there is a stage with puppets in the foreground, demonstrating Miss Phillips' inclination toward the dramatic.

For so young an exhibitor, Miss Phillips' collection is of extraordinary interest with her ceramic work indicating her field of great promise. Future exhibits will undoubtedly reflect a development which cannot help but come, fired by the enthusiasm she shows for her work.
