Detroit Cornell Club Invited To Dance At Oakland Hills

Many In Bloomfield And Birmingham Will Entertain Out-of-Town Guests

By MARJORIE ELAINE PORTER

The special spotlight in Birmingham and the Hills this week-end seems to focus its brightest beams upon the Michigan-Cornell football game as the event causing the greatest excitement in the way of social preparations.

The game is proving a powerful magnet to draw as guests from various parts of the country, many who claim scholastic kinship to Cornell University. Numerous house-parties, large and small, and have been planned for the week-end. In addition to the game, the football dinner dance to be given Saturday at Oakland Hills Country Club, to which members of the Cornell Club of Detroit have been invited, is included among the red letter events of the week-end.

The hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Davidson of Oakridge will be extended to several guests from Cleveland, O., among whom will be Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Frand, Hark Patterson and Mr. and Mrs. Hasselt Hubbs. Joining the party in attending the game and subsequent dance, will be Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Pittman, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Saunders, Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Halsted and Mr. and Mrs. J. Robert Mosby.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Toney, Jr., of Wing Lake Shores, have as their house guests Mr. and Mrs. Gustave F. Waters of Derby, N. C., and Edward Proctor of Washington, D. C. Mr. and Mrs. Toney and their guests will be included in a large group from the Hills and Wing Lake Shores who plan to attend the game together.

Mary Morley Becomes Bride At Simple Church Ceremony

Byford an altar banked with cypress fern and white chrysantheums, and lighted with ivory tapers, Miss Mary Kathleen Morley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter George Morley of Birmingham Hills, and James Morrison Taylor, son of Mrs. Charles Byford of Detroit, spoke their marriage vows in Christ Church Cranbrook, Saturday at high noon. The Rev. Dr. S. Barquist, rector, read the nuptial service.

Miss Morley was a lovely bride in the quaint gown of alenon lace ivory tulle worn by her mother. A coronet of the same lace held in place a veil of illusion, extending the length of her train, and forming also a short face veil. The bridal bouquet was of lilies of the valley.

Mrs. George Rupert Pink, who presided as matron of honor, was attired in a gown of brown velvet, made with a short jacket and sleeves of unique design. She wore a scarf about her throat, looped on one shoulder and fastened with a Chanel clasp. A small hat, also of brown velvet, and a bouquet of tallman roses, completed her costume.

The gowns of the four bridesmaids were similar in color and design, fashioned of unique design, made with short circular cape, and velvet scarfs falling from the shoulders. They wore hats of

She Names Assistants Don't Command Child If You Would Teach Him Obedience

Dr. Myers Tells Better Way of Securing Co-operation From Youngsters

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.
Head Department Parent Education Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

MOST PARENTS, when they ask about obedience, have in mind what they get in mind to punish the child to do. They want him to do. They think of forcing him to do something, and go there, when they say so. Some of my readers, judging from the letters I receive, think erroneously that I advocate punishment to procure obedience of this sort. I never have said so. On the contrary, I requested, have advised making unpleasant what we would like to do. In several articles I have written I have shown that stubborn children show that most stubbornly by their resistance to these children to co-operate, and do not distinguish between a request and a command, and who are different members to assist Mrs. Robert F. Watt, general chairman.

Mrs. Lewis R. Sappington will be in charge on Monday, and Mrs. Hal Wolfe on Tuesday. For the remaining days of the week those on duty will be: Wednesday, Mrs. Langley Smart; Thursday, Mrs. Charles D. McCall; Friday, Mrs. Franklin Fricker, and Saturday, Mrs. Edith Watkins Dunn of Pleasant Ridge.

I have said these things in several ways and placed in my book "The Modern Parent," said them also in my pamphlet, "Punishment and Rewards."

Let me reiterate: Don't say "DO THIS to the little child (seldom to the older child), as a command; say "DON'T DO THAT," and rarely say it. Merely request the child to do what you want him to do; explain

CONTRACT BRIDGE

Written For Central Press and The Birmingham Eccentric

FAMOUS BRIDGE TEACHER

FORTUNATE ERRORS

MISTAKEN STRATEGY comes times when a player's current practice, and sometimes it proves correct. Both South and West follow a strategy that is based on adhering to contract strategy, and both errors added North to go game at an unopposed contract, whereas his opponents, not being vulnerable, should have outbid their vulnerable adversaries sitting North and South.

There was not much more to the play of the hand. Dummy's 4 of hearts was a trick, but the trump was led from dummy. The declarer won with his Ace, then he spread his hearts and led his hearts, having lost only two spade tricks, and one diamond trick.

West must have had a good spades against poor defense, but he would have lost two trumps to an opening lead of his lone club, and then allowed his partner to win a trick with his Ace of diamonds, and give North a second ruff. Two Aces, two trumps and one heart would have set the contract. Two tricks of spades, but going down two tricks would not have been expensive. Certainly North and South had to thank West for so easy a ruff.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Davis of Sunset Terrace entertained a small group of friends informally at their home Monday evening. The guests included Dr. and Mrs. Charles J. Kappel, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Kellie, Mrs. M. E. Brown, George T. Nickerson, Mrs. Paul Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. Carl G. Wambarger.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon B. Kellett of Lone Pine road and Mrs. Earl Peterson of Cranbrook will host Friday to attend a Century Progress Exposition in Chicago returning Sunday.

Garden Groups Hold Joint Program And Tea

The Birmingham Branch of the Women's National Farm and Garden Association entertained members of the Bloomfield Hills Branch at a meeting and tea at the Community House Monday.

The program was devoted to a discussion of "Gardens Here and Abroad" by Arthur Berger of Toledo.

William McCallum was chairman of hostesses for the day. Assisting her were Mrs. Harry D. Howard, Mrs. M. E. Jones, Mrs. Leslie C. Allan, Mrs. Donald C. Van Pelt, and Mrs. C. B. Rumble.

Members present were Mrs. Noble, Mrs. Robert F. Grindley, Mrs. Clark Bennett, and Mrs. F. H. Holt, Jr.

Mrs. C. B. Rumble of Broadway boulevard returned from Cranbrook, where she spent the past week

South made an old-fashioned opening bid of 1-No Trump, upon three guarded suits, because he knew it was a declaration of hand. Modern strategy would have caused West to overcall with 2-Spades, or double a bid, but he followed the no trump call, as many auction players were accustomed to. West returned a bid of 4-Hearts, and South jumped to 4-Hearts. West feared to show his spades. That trump strategy started him dead finding missing spade strength South.

His fourth-best spade, and West garnered two tricks in that suit. Dummy made West feel that his loss returned a trick to him. He did not want to help establish the long club suit, and of course he could not lead a diamond or another spade without
