DANCERS WILL SUP ON FRENCH STREET

Romantic Touch Of Paris Brought To Birmingham Club For Opening Dance

The grill of the Birmingham Golf Club has gone Parisian. Striped awnings extend over inviting little tables spread with checkered cloths. Gay geraniums add their bit of color to shop windows. Brilliant posters inform the passerby in French of dramatic and other events. Old-fashioned street lamps lend an air of old world romance with their soft glow, and a sign post bears the street name "Rue de la Paix."

In other words the stage is set to give guests who attend the opening spring dance and buffet supper at the club Saturday evening, the illusion of dining and dancing in Paris.
