When the Cat's Away The Mice Will Play!

Ain't it the truth? The mice will play every time. Yes, ma'am. The Boss—that is to say, Mr. Davidson, politely speaking—has gone away on a well earned vacation, and we are running things to suit ourselves.

While he is gone we want our sales records to show a decided increase. There is one way that is sure to cause an increase in sales, and that is to knock off prices and let profits go hungry for a while. That's one sure way.

We are just like the young fellow who was forced to live with his mother-in-law. Their dealings were of the most unpleasant sort. Never had the young man done one thing that pleased the lady, and she never hesitated in telling him his faults. He went to the city for a few days, and while there he received a message telling him his mother-in-law had passed away. He was to send word home immediately whether her body should be embalmed, cremated, or buried. This is the wire he sent home: "Embaln, cremate, and also bury her. Don't take any chances."

We are taking no chances. When we want to increase our sales, and clean up some broken lots, we don't trust to luck, that's one thing we learned from the boss. We put the prices down where they talk for themselves, and the goods just naturally navigate therefrom.

The sale is now on. There are dozens of real bargains all over the store and a special sale on the remains of our summer dresses and hats, there are plenty to pick from, and such thrilling bargains!

Along side this message I'm listing some of the items so that you may get an idea of the values, and to make sure you'll be here to get your share.

Do come!
