ROOSEVELT GETS ACTION

Lloyd George's Remark Recalled in Comparing F. D. With Hoover

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON—Years ago, when Lloyd George was a news correspondent in London, I had an interview with David Lloyd George, at that time British chancellor of the exchequer.

He said many things of application only to the then present, but one remark he made stuck in my memory.

"I like," he observed, "to see a man do something."

"I'd rather," he'd do something foolish than simply sit and vegetate."

President Roosevelt is but what good he never translates them into actions."

By no means implying that anything foolish is involved in the 25-year program of public works that President Roosevelt is launching, I nevertheless do call to mind this expression by England's World War prime minister—the man who made it being that it is a program that "F. D." really is LAUNCHING.

Let anyone who is to step up the slack in employment in future decades.

Now, Herbert Hoover suggested just such a program (not specifically a 25-year program, but a long term program, to absorb unemployment in emergencies) at a meeting of the country's governors, before he was President. The only weakness in the plan was that President Hoover never DID any thing about it until the depression struck, and then it was too late to improve it well in a hurry.

President Roosevelt, say what ever he like may say about him, gets ACTION.

WE HEARD IT SAID BY—

Dr. W. D. Henderson, director of the Extension Division of the University of Michigan: "It is the bankers in the small community who determine the future of the community."

He was caught in a "bad system."

The Limit Reached

"I don't mind lending you my garden tools, my lawn mower, my ice cream freezer and a lot of other things, but I'll give you fair warning, Rogers."

"What do you mean?"

"If you come over here trying to borrow my portable garage, I'm going to say 'No.'"

The new president, Ralph W. Bricker, the speaker of Tuesday's meeting was City Manager James W. Parry, who described the progress of CWA projects in Birmingham.

Doug Davis, young Birmingham lightweight boxer, secured a victory in his first bout as a Golden Gloves tournament contender Monday night when he outpointed Jack Smith in one of the matches in the novice/lightweight class at the Dearborn Recreation Center.

Davis, a Baldwin High School student, lives on Pilgrim road.

John McKee, live-wire owner of a number of local gasoline and oil stations, was the week-end recipient of an Irish newspaper, the Newry Telegraph. Newry is a large town eight miles from Rathfriland, where Mr. McKee was born and from whence he came to the United States 25 years ago.

"Irish newspapers present their news and advertisements in a more cumbersome style than American journals," Mr. McKee observes. "You have to read more to find out what's going on. The stories are long, with more of the literary style in them. The ads have fewer illustrations than those in the U. S. A."

The first of a flood of traffic tickets promised by Chief of Police John P. Hackett for motorists who double-park their cars on West Maple avenue between Pierce and Bates streets were issued during the past week. The established fine for the offense is $2. Street-keepers in these two blocks, anxious to save their patrons the $2 and at the same time keep their patronage, have begun to urge wider use of the large parking space at the corner of Willis street and Woodward avenue, which is rarely, if ever, filled.

A cashier's check for $5 from a person signing himself "One of Your Readers" has been received by The Eccentric with the request that it be divided into three cash prizes to be distributed to the school children who sell the greatest number of tickets for the performance of "Rip Van Winkle" at the Community House next Tuesday. Inasmuch as the proceeds of the performance are to go to the Michigan Humane Society, the idea was a noble one.

but unfortunately school authorities find it impossible to sponsor such a content among their students. As an alternative, they have suggested that the money be used to pay admissions to the show for indigent children who would not otherwise be able to see it. But the donor of the check himself has asked that if the content is not carried on, the money be turned over directly to the Humane Society. The Eccentric is taking this occasion to inform the generous reader that this will be done unless the order is countermanded before Saturday noon and the donor decides the suggestion of the school authorities is a better idea.

This Wanderer respectfully calls the attention of a certain bill-board on the west side of Woodward avenue, at the south limit of Birmingham, because Mr. John is in charge of Chevrolet Motor Company copy and has much to say about the advertising theme used by that great unit of General Motors, we suggest that he search for the letter "C" left out of the name of the automobile. The bill-board reads the word "Chevrolet." Unless, of course, Mr. John purposely ordered the letter omitted.

In passing The Eccentric office we suggest that you pause and use the beautiful presentation of the process of four-color printing, made up specially for you. It depicts the various stages of a job of printing, revealing the manner in which one color of ink blends into another as it goes through the modern press. Incidentally, the sample on display is one that caused the publishers of the Inland Printer, America's greatest technical journal on that subject, to ask us for sufficient inserts to be included in their monthly specimen of excellent printing. This, in itself, is a distinct honor for The Eccentric—and we modestly admit it, of course.

Cliff Weigand, widely known Ponfraz musician, brought his son, Roy, to the meeting of the Birmingham Lions Club in the Community House Wednesday noon, where the younger Weigand demonstrated that he, too, knows a bit about sharp and flat and the like. Cliff played a group of piano-accompaniment solos, and furnished the accompaniment for Roy in a group of saxophone selections.

There is at least one teacher in Birmingham who isn't afraid to admit his age in public. This was revealed at the Teachers' Club banquet in the Community House last Thursday night when the speaker, Dr. W. D. Henderson, asked if there were any members present who remembered "way back when Superintendent Waldo was at the head of the Birmingham school system. W. S. Toothaker, science teacher at Baldwin High, immediately raised his hand, upon which Dr. Henderson remarked, "I see we still have a few archaeological specimens left."
