CITY'S EXPENSE BELOW BUDGET

Report Shows Costs For Eight Months Were $15,000 Under Allowance

The City of Birmingham's expenditures for the eight months from July 1, 1933, to March 1, 1934, were nominally $16,190.63 below the budget allowance for that period, according to a report submitted to the Commission Monday night by City Manager James W. Parry.

The largest items by which the allowance exceeded the annual expense, however, were one of $4,625.01 for the welfare department, the cost of which has been borne to date by federal and state funds, but part of which may later be charged back to individual municipalities; and $4,507.19 for Baldwin Public Library. By agreement with the Commission, the library is receiving this year only that portion of its 1 mill tax levy which is collected, and this amount to date is about 50 per cent of the estimate set up in the budget.

In addition to the welfare and library, 19 other departments have spent amounts ranging from $1.42 to $1,224.42 less than the budget allowed in the eight-month period, the report shows. These include Commission, elections, manager's department, clerk's department, treasurer's department, legal department, health department, police department, building inspection, sewer department, street department, grading and gravel, street cleaning, snow removal, pavement repair, sidewalks, trees, rubbish disposal and chlorinating.

Departments in which the expenditures have exceeded the budget allowance in amounts ranging from 46 cents to $600.60 include Municipal Building, general administration, engineering department, assessor's department, fire department, justice department, parks, street lighting and street signs.

The total expense for the period was $89,922.75, as compared with a budget allowance of $96,113.41 according to the report.

What The Women Think About It

Each week The Eccentric asks several women chosen at random from the telephone book, "do you have a question of general interest in Birmingham?"

The question this week: Do you think that conditions have improved or grown worse since prohibition was repealed? Mrs. Colin Campbell, Long Lake road: "I see evils in prohibition, but I believe in it because I think that it protects the underprivileged. It seems to me that conditions are worse today than in the days of prohibition, especially because of the influence that beer gardens have on youth."

Mrs. J. Richardson, East Long Lake road: "I think that conditions have bettered since prohibition. It is better for people to be drinking the liquor they get today than the awful stuff they used to get. Those persons who are going to drink, whatever they get."

William B. Burke, 907 Ruffin street: "I am poorly informed on the subject, but from what I have read it seems that conditions are better in some districts than in others. It is a matter of principle with the individual, as to whether those persons who are going to do those things will do them anyway, whether we have prohibition or not."

Mrs. Neal D. Robertson, 1192 West Emmons avenue: "Conditions are a little better. At least repeal has done away with blind pigs. If we're going to have liquor it is better to be legalized. Beer gardens are bad, but they will be taken care of in time."

Mrs. J. C. Ring, East Long Lake: "I think conditions have improved. It is no worse for young children now than when prohibition was in effect."

Mrs. Vern Colburn, 312 Hamilton avenue: "Things have improved. More money has been put in circulation, and more men have been put back to work. Conditions are better as far as drinking is concerned, too. There is not nearly as much drunkenness and people don't act the same as they did during prohibition days."

Mrs. John Ring, 529 Stanley street: "Conditions have improved. Our own business, at least, has improved 100 per cent. What people are drinking now is better for them, too, than what they drank during prohibition days."

Mrs. Charles Higby, 684 Pierce street: "Things have improved very much, at least not enough to amount to anything. The only improvement has been in the tax system. We can't buy anything any more that doesn't have a tax on it."

Mrs. J. C. Irish, 1404 East Humphrey street: "In some ways things have improved. There is a little more work now. I don't think people are as anxious to drink as they were before. The old saying holds good now. 'What you can't have is what you want.'"

Mrs. John B. Humphrey, 629 Vinewood avenue: "With the younger classes, things have grown worse. There is much more drinking, more drunkenness and more crime caused from drinking. With older people, those who drink will do so anyway. Liquor is too easy to get now."

Mrs. H. F. McClintock, 191 East Lincoln avenue: "Conditions have improved. People are spending more money and the tax from liquor sales helps to pay the school teachers."

Mrs. F. R. Jennings, Thirteen Mile road: "I don't think conditions have improved—not for the young folks."
