Germany Schultz To Address Dinner

Birmingham Chapter, R. A. M., To Confer Royal Arch Degree Following Banquet

Germany Schultz, one of the most famous football players ever turned out at the University of Michigan, and known as the all-time all-American center, will be the chief speaker at a banquet to be held at the Masonic Temple here Monday evening, May 21, which will precede a ceremony in which the Birmingham Chapter No. 93, R. A. M., will confer the Royal Arch degree.

The banquet, beginning at 6:30 P. M., will also be addressed by William R. Brown, a 33rd degree Mason, and past commander-in-chief of the Detroit Soverign Consistory; Orrin G. Bickford, grand high priest of the grand chapter of Michigan, and other state officers.

Stanley Treadwell, high priest of the chapter, will preside. Reservations must be made in advance, and may be made with Claude Morrow or other chapter officers.

The candidates for the degree to be conferred after the banquet are Dr. John P. Wood, Russell W. Hardman and Edward H. Laird.

the Linden Leader, now owned and edited by venerable and loveable and albeit ancient J. E. McMullen. He, "Doc," knew all about the time I took Mr. McMullen through Ionia and Jackson prisons, in an attempt to convince "Mac" that capital punishment is all wrong. "Doc" had been, before coming to Ludington, down Detroit-way, and had stopped off to visit Father Coughlin. In passing The Eccentric office he had mentioned to his companions that "I ought to stop in and tell that Averill chap that I agree with him on his stand against capital punishment, and hope he keeps on trying to convert the heathen." So, when I met him at Harry Stolberg's the evening of May 1, he related what he had said, concluding with the old observation that it's a small world, after all, isn't it?" For 10 years "Doc" has been on the radio, is a member of the National Radio Council, and a year or two ago was a member of the American delegation that went to Iceland to participate in the ceremonial attending the commemoration of that nation's 500th (I think it was this age) year as a continuing form of government.

On May 2, as all of us arrived at the Little Manistee river for an afternoon of angling, it appears that Cal Johnson (who also writes for various national magazines, and has a story in the last issue of Esquire), somehow or other pushed himself into "Doc's" waders, leaving the latter without any except a pair four sizes too large. So "Doc," always able to make himself at home wherever he may be, took out his copy of H. A. Overstreet's "A Guide To Civilized Loafing," and placed his rather short, plump self in a horizontal position where contentment soon enveloped him. I got into the stream myself, and an hour later turned a bend where, before me, the stream churned itself into a nice, deep pool. I cast my fly beneath an over-hanging tree, and managed beautifully to have the lead wet fly cuddle up to one of its branches. "Doc," who was slyly observing me at the time, rose to his bare feet (he had taken a brief walk, as well as removed his shoes and sox and was getting right down to earth) (would you know a secret about "Doc," then learn that his feet are small, quite chubby, and quite able to dig into the side of a steep bank as he helps you retrieve your fly), and released my fly and leader from the tree. "Any luck?" he queried. "Not yet," I answered, continuing, "gosh, Doc, if I got a keeper on now I'd hardly know what to do for surprise." And I cast again, once, twice, and then and there, following "Doc's" assistance in releasing my fly from that tree, the charm of his Waltonian office had captivated a nine inch rainbow trout! Of course, I gave him all the credit, then went on my way. The dominie went back to his book and his horizontal position; as I passed from view of him he lay there on the warm earth, one bare shin bone and foot held aloft on the knee of his other bare shin bone and foot, his book held vertically before his eyes, the perfect personification of the book's title which, I remind you, was "A Guide To Civilized Loafing." What a picture he made—if only I had had my pocket camera with me at the time I would have recorded him for all of Chicago to see. Sunday, in his sermon, the preacher of the People's Church of Chicago related his experiences on that trip; I tuned in on him just in time to hear him mention the names of those who made up the fellowship of that very enjoyable opening of the 1934 trout season. (Frankly, I did not hear all of the sermon, since considerable static was on the air, so I really do not know how truthful he remained in telling of the catch. However, since he is president of the Izaak Walton League of America, I asume that his position allows him more than ordinary leeway in stretching the truth and, besides, he is a preacher!)

Friday evening—since we visitors were leaving the next day—the group had a sort of informal banquet at McEmber's Tavern in Ludington. Among those present, besides Bradley, Stolberg, Miller, Starr, Johnson, Wahlman, and myself, were Lawrence Lvnd, secretary of the Ludington Chamber of Commerce; Fred Church, wealthy capitalist and manufacturer; Fred Brown, retired Ludington citizen who now dedicates his remaining years to bothering trout on the Pere Marquette River; Fred Reed, editor of the Ludington Daily News; Fred Boushaw, Ludington businessman; John Moran, manager of the Stearns' Hotel; and Carl Stolberg, son of Harry, whose 17-year-old legs went out from under him one afternoon as he was wading in the Pere Marquette.

Thus concludeth this rambling record of trout fishing. (But you just wait until Starr, Miller, and this reporter goeth back to the Pere Marquette in two or three weeks! And may the truth be in us to the end!)

Team's Path Leads To Man's Identity

An unknown man found lying wounded and unconscious, on Nicolet road a half mile north of West Long Lake road late Monday afternoon, was identified by Sergeant Delas Anderson and Patrolman Stanley Kevern of the Bloomfield Hills police department when they followed horse and wagon tracks which led to the injured man's home.

The tracks led to 674 Franklin street, Pontiac, the address of Fred Barnes, 52 years old, who, the officers discovered later, had suffered a fainting spell and fallen off his wagon on Nicolet road. Left unguided, the horses had gone straight to their stables. Barnes was without any mark of identification until he regained consciousness several hours later.

Barnes, who suffered a broken shoulder blade, cuts and bruises, was removed to St. Joseph's Mercy Hospital where he is recovering.

it is no stranger than the men of his cabinet, Dr. Pollock said.

Propaganda Experts

"The men about Hitler are quite as important as Hitler himself," he said, citing especially their adeptness at setting the stage for the dramatic performances of their dictator, and of broadcasting propaganda for the Nazi movement.

The cabinet is, in fact, he said, the only remaining group of administrative importance in the government, the Reichstag having been reduced to a point where it is "only a cheering section for Hitler when he wants to make a speech.

Grandma Is Mayor

Mayor Charlean Williams

This is Mrs. Charlean Moss Williams, 65-year-old grandmother, who has assumed her duties as mayor of Washington, Ark., a town of 500 inhabitants which served as the capital of Arkansas during the Civil War. The first official move made by Mayor Williams, known to the residents as "grandma," was to order a good cleaning of the city streets.

of Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, Rachmaninoff, Debussy and Lent. The recital is open to the public.

The friends and relatives in Birmingham of "Perce" Pease, a former Birminghamite himself, will be interested to know that his wife has been made hostess-manager of the Thendara Park Country Club at Walters Lake, northwest of Clarkston. The Peases formerly lived in Royal Oak.

Ralph W. Bricker, president of the Birmingham Exchange Club and Oliver Kirk, vice-president, were appointed Tuesday noon to serve as delegates for their club when the Michigan Affiliated Exchange Clubs hold their annual convention in Jackson, June 11-12. Manley Bailey and Rice W. Howell were selected as alternates. Ralph A. Wilson is chairman of the On-To-Jackson Committee, and is working to send as many as possible to this two-day state jubilee. No local meeting will be held June 12, it was decided.

A number of young enthusiasts from Birmingham and Franklin Village have already entered the annual kite contest to be held in Franklin, Saturday, May 19, at 2:30 P. M.

Among them are Jerry Smith, Bobby and Ann Woodruff, Patsy Smith, Freddie Pew, Barbara Broock, Bobby Swanson, Benny Converse, Vernon Converse, Dick Gracey, Dick Shepherd, Brewster and Mary Elizabeth Smith and Nathalie Towle.

The contest is open to all ages.

The City Commission will take time off next Monday night to make an inspection of the fire department and equipment. The inspection will begin at 8 P. M. and the Commission will hold its meeting directly afterwards.

Approximately 500 golfers played the Bloomfield Township Park Course Saturday and Sunday when it was opened under the control of Birmingham, City Manager James W. Parry estimated. Sunday's total alone was 375. Revenue for the two days amounted to $173.

Prof. H. D. Curtis of the University of Michigan will give a popular lecture on "Solar Eclipses" in the auditorium of Cranbrook School this evening at 8 o'clock. The lecture will be given under the auspices of the Cranbrook Institute of Science.

WE HEARD IT SAID BY—

J. M. Hardin, manager, Parks Coal Company: "The problem this year will not be that people will be saving money by buying their coal in the summer, but that, because of the 35-hour week and the consequent shortage of miners, they will probably be hard pressed to get coal during the regular mining season if they don't buy it in the summer.
