COUZENS GIVES ARMS QUIZ AND

Sympathizes With Move To Continue Inquiry, He Tells Delegation

Senator James Couzens is in complete sympathy with the sentiment that the U. S. Senate's investigation of the activities of munitions manufacturers should be continued, assured a group of men and women representing more than 20 organizations in the 17th congressional district when they appealed to him at his office in the Wabash Building here Friday morning, asking him to vote for further appropriation to complete the inquiry when Congress convenes next January.

The delegation's visit was part of a nation-wide non-partisan movement sponsored by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. According to Mrs. George T. Hendrie, of Bloomfield Hills, who organized the local delegation, similar committees have been organized in every other congressional district in the country, and will carry to all members of both houses of Congress the same plea that they give their support to continuation of the munitions investigation before they return to Washington this winter. Mrs. Hendrie is a past president of the Women's International League in Michigan and a former member of the national board of directors.

Couzens Optimistic
After several members of the delegation had addressed Senator Couzens, urging elimination of the profit motive from war as a necessary step toward the preservation of world peace, Senator Couzens replied that he was cognizant of no division of opinion among members of Congress as to whether the inquiry should be continued, and said he contemplated no difficulty in securing the necessary appropriation from the Senate contingent fund.

The principal speech made on behalf of the delegation was given by Mrs. Charles J. Shain, representing the international relations study groups of the Birmingham League of Women Voters, the American Association of University Women, and the Birmingham Women's Club. "I do not pretend to voice the political opinions of the women in the groups studying international relations over which I preside," Mrs. Shain said. "I am here merely to present to you the fact that we have been investigating the munitions activities and that we earnestly hope such additional appropriations of funds may be voted by the Senate as are required to carry on the work of the Nye Committee until all the facts are known."

"Fortunes For Lobbies"
"We believe from our study that the causes of war are bound up with profits derived from sales of munitions and war supplies, and that groups are the best customer of the munition rings because the War and Navy Departments must secure their supplies from such concerns, often at excessive and unobtainable prices."

"We believe that it is important for munitions firms to oppose arms embargoes and restrictions or limitations of armaments, and that the votes in the 72nd Congress of senators from munition-making states show such states and senators are influenced in such matters by these powerful industries."

"We believe that munition makers spend fortunes to maintain lobbies to urge armament progress and millions for 'concessions' to public officials for opposing 'peace programs.' We believe further from our study that if the committee is allowed to complete its investigation it will bring forth recommendations to the Senate which will have a direct influence on removing profits from war, and thus stimulating world peace."

"We believe also that the traffic in arms cannot be controlled by one country alone, and that, hence, a permanent supervisory committee with adequate powers should be set up by armament-making nations to control the sale of arms and thus to check the mad race in armaments that is upon us."

Others who spoke for the delegation included Mrs. George Hadley, of Pontiac, chairman of the Oakland County Branch of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom; Mrs. Fred E. Gross, of Royal Oak, president of the Oakland County Federation of Women's Clubs; Major G. Z. Ide, of Detroit, president of the William Muir Russell Chapter of the Reserve Officers Association; Fred B. Beckman, of Clarkston, president of the Oakland County Farm Bureau; Miss Agnes Baynes, president of the Birmingham unit of the American Legion Auxiliary; J. B. Howarth, secretary of the Birmingham Rotary Club; Miss Anna Neuberger, of Pontiac, representing the League of Catholic Women and the Pontiac Business and Professional Women's Club, and Mrs. Katherine Vahay Mills, president of the Birmingham Women's Club.

Mrs. L. M. Baker, Mrs. Warner L. Forsyth, Mrs. W. A. Fraser, and Mrs. Lancelot Minor, all representatives of the League of St. James' Women and the St. James' Episcopal Church, Birmingham; Mrs. James M. Crabb, of 2414 1/2 E. 10th Woods, past president of the Royal Oak Women's Club; B. J. Meirow, secretary of the Birmingham Lions Club; Dr. Bernard Friedlander, past-commander of the Washington Post of the American Legion and president of the Sojourners Club, Detroit; Mrs. A. P. Peppers, Pleasant Ridge, president of the Oakland County Council of Women; Oliver H. Kirk, president of the Birmingham Exchange Club; Mrs. William F. Burgess, president of the Huntington Woods Women's Club; Mrs. William M. Dow, Royal Oak; Mrs. J. Edwin Watson, Royal Oak; the Rev. Dr. John O. Young, Royal Oak; State Sen. Albert M. Bielowski, Detroit; and Frank Day Smith, Rosedale Park, chairman of the 17th district Republican Clubs.

POLICE ROUGH TACTICS HIT

(Continued from Page 2, Part 2) maintaining law and order. Our children are taught that the policeman is their best friend. They can not now retain these teachings in view of their actions of last Halloween.

"I feel that the police have no right to resort to rough tactics in handling any offense of society as long as no resistance is offered by the offender. And more so when the offender in the case is a young person. We have laws to protect dumb animals from the one who abuses or mistreats them. Why should we make an exception in the case of those who mistreat human animals as some of our officers do?"

"The point I wish to make is this: We have laws to protect as from malicious destruction of property and those guilty of disorderly conduct. If our sons and daughters have committed offenses against society, let us resort to the orderly recourse of law, and not feel we should take the law into our own hands to punish them. I was informed in my discussion with the Commission that a good shaking up was what some of these needed, and in view of the fact that the parents had apparently fallen down on this requisite in the bringing up of their young folks, it is the duty of the authorities to do this."

"Would Consult Parents"
"However, not one of those in authority, or anyone else for that matter, would thank or permit someone else assisting them in rearing their children, when unsolicited. If the police felt that a good old-fashioned licking was the proper treatment for the offender, I feel certain that the parents themselves would and could be glad to administer same with the assistance of the officer if necessary, when once the parent has been informed of the seriousness of the offense."

"But, rather than resort to all of this and especially a repetition of the whole affair another year, something else should be done. I do not believe that the passage of the proposed curfew law will help, but rather will be a prima facie evidence of our inability to cope with the situation and will also place us in the eyes of ridicule throughout the state. We should seek other methods rather than revert to medieval tactics."

"Let us, as has been suggested, do a dance. This should be preferable to an open air affair where the youngsters can feel free to be noisy if they wish. Suitable prizes for costumes should be given to make it worth while. Let the young folks assist in the preparation and give doughnuts and cider with perhaps apples, and if the weather be unfit, let it be held inside. Let their work off their pent-up emotions along such lines and those who are still mischievous can more easily be rounded up and due justice meted out. I am sure we could count on the well-behaved co-operation of the young folks and a much better feeling would result all around."

Charges Could Help
"Now, concerning the meting out of justice to those guilty of offending society. The law has dealt with them accordingly. I was informed that some of these young men are fourth and fifth offenders. I was also informed that they are headed straight for prison unless they change their ways. Can the citizens of Birmingham sit idly by without so much as the raising of a hand to assist these young men in saving themselves? We must remember it was this type of I-don't-care fellow who made the real fighters and the real aviators in the service to our country in the World War. These young men must be let alone, safer courses and made to see the finer things of life."
