A Woman's Impressions Of A Century of Progress

"Woman and Industry" might be the title of this article, the third and last in a series written for The Eccentric about the Chicago World's Fair. The author is a resident of Franklin Village.

By Mrs. BERYL S. KAHN

To what extent has this last century changed the interests of women? It is strange that hundreds, nay, thousands of women enter the Ford Building to see the exhibit of industrial progress as this relates to vehicles? Would our grandmothers have found interest in an exhibit relating to mechanics? Perhaps education has broadened the horizon of women to the extent that 65 per cent of the visitors to the Ford Building are women.

Of course, the beauty of the building and the accessibility of all exhibits made possible by the efficient and artistic planning are a potent factor in attracting the enormous hordes of female visitors.

Three Units

The building comprises three distinct units, an historical display, industrial exhibits and the Ford Museum. These units divide the building into three masses. The dominant circular central pavilion represents a gigantic transmission. There is a circular screen of steel and glass, supported by columns of chromium-plated copper on plywood that divides the gallery from the central rotunda, which is open to the sky, its terraced steps concealing the lighting apparatus. The color scheme is white, with tones of blue in the floor. Above the machinery is painted blue, with chromium trim, and the lettering is in copper.

The grand rotunda is a masterpiece. Not only are the proportions of this space charming, but the wall decorations strike a new note in mural art. They are a series of photographs, done on a colossal scale, which show the mechanical, metallurgical and assembly operations used in the making of a car as well as the mining, lumbering and other operations for obtaining the raw materials. This is the greatest photographic panorama ever built.

Not content with appealing to an interested audience through its sense of appreciation of the practical, efficient and beautiful to look at, this exhibit also appeals to the ear, for by walking through an inviting garden, splendidly landscaped, one finds comfortable seats in front of an open air platform upon which the Detroit Symphony Orchestra plays exquisite symphony music. It does not rest a feminist to sense industry's appeal to women.

After some contemplation, a visit to the third unit enlightens. An ordinary barn of a dirt farm is converted into a modern machine shop which the utilization of farm products for industrial purposes. It is here the lowly hay becomes a marble-like substance and its ultimate goal may be the knob on a gearshift lever.

Women Sailors Open Championship Series

Luncheon at Orchard Lake Country Club Friday launched the championship series for women sailors. The series will be continued this week and next, on Tuesdays and Fridays, the regular sailing days for women.

Skippers attending the luncheon included Mrs. Frederick S. Strong, Mrs. Theodore F. W. Meyer, Mrs. W. Laurance Shaffer, Mrs. H. W. Hitchcock, Mrs. C. Tylron Van Dusen, Mrs. T. Reynolds Donovan, Mrs. Paul L. Penfield and Mrs. Robert F. Gindley. Other guests at the luncheon were members of the crew. Mrs. Meyer won the first race of the series.

Championship races for the men will begin Sunday (and continue until Sept. 29), when the season will close with a Bumer for the sailors and the presentation of trophies.

Escaped, one finds comfortable seats in front of an open air platform upon which the Detroit Symphony Orchestra plays exquisite symphony music. It does not rest a feminist to sense industry's appeal to women.

Old-Time Garden Flower Show Feature

The romance of grandmother's garden with its quaint blooms and herbs, seldom seen in modern times, will be revived in the re-production of an old-fashioned garden which will be a feature of the annual fall flower show of the Bloomfield Hills and District Horticultural Society to be held at the Community House Saturday. The exhibit will be arranged by Tom Pearson of Grosse Pointe Shores.

Not only will a wide variety of classes be shown among the floral exhibits, but numerous classes will be devoted to prize specimens of late summer vegetables and early fall fruits. Fifteen classes for flowers, fruits and vegetables will be open to non-members.

remiscing is a — pastime that belongs — to summer-time and so it's just about over. We hope that everybody has had a good time reminiscing with us about the little country store... remembering funny things... things we hadn't thought of for years and, from what we've heard, we believe you did enjoy it. But, just about this time of the year, people begin taking life more seriously again... and so, we'd probably better settle down and stick strictly to business, too...

watch Davidson's advertisements (we've been doing some pretty important thinking and planning this summer). We sincerely believe that our sales and fashion presentations (all the way from baby bibs to luxurious coats) will be what you need and want, and at prices you want to pay...

...in this respect, as a matter of fact, Davidson's humbly hopes never to outgrow the ideas of the little country store... answering all your needs... preserving friendliness and understanding...

...because business was built that way.
